NAHS Chapter Spotlight

Merrimack High School, East Merrimack, NH

"I have always loved art." This is a shared sentiment amongst members of our National Art Honor Society. I, myself, have no better explanation when asked by students and friends why I teach art... I simply love it.

"A memory comes to mind when I think about art and life. I visited my father in Florida this past summer. He recently survived cancer and he uses almost any newfound opportunity to share wisdoms with me. I recall a particular insight in which he adamantly and passionately told me how important art is! I listened to him express glee about how he paints every week and the feeling of loss when not creating something. He spoke of how, 'creativity' kept him going and that, 'creativity' is one of life's perks. I know what he is talking about. I too, love to solve problems, use my hands and brain, and explore or play. I find that art is my outlet and like my father, I cannot live without it."

—Shanna Gray, Sponsor

Sadie Tupper and Mrs. Gray.

Our chapter of the NAHS at Merrimack High School started about 8 years ago, and with each passing year I gain knowledge about how best to use art, the talents of our members, and the highly creative natures that they possess. We meet routinely. By this, I mean most every Wednesday throughout the year! In past years we met maybe every other Wednesday, however, this year, lead by senior President Kelsea Goodrow, Vice President Jessica Silva, Secretary Josh Meier, Treasurer and Historian twins Tristan and Zoe Lanier, and other highly involved members like Erik Ho and Amanda Doherty, our chapter is overly enthusiastic! These students, along with the hoard of underclassmen that have discovered our Society, exude service and character, and above all, a love for art.

A favorite volunteer activity this year was hosting a "Puppy Picasso" table at the annual "walk-for-whiskers" event held by the Nashua Humane Society. I shared my love and support of animals with my students and they were more than willing to help. We set up shop behind the dock dog's tournament and waited for our clientele. We spent all day dipping dog's paws in paint and watching them dance around the canvases. We accepted donations that went directly to the shelter. It was great. A new member, I'cean, bent gracefully to each dog and gave them kisses on their heads before starting to paint. The cutest Doxin dog pressed to reach another member Eric, by going under our paint table to sit in his lap. Besides seeing a lot of smiles, the members enjoyed each other's company and bonded while using talents in the arts!

Uniting members is a valued aspect of the NAHS. This ideal is echoed in the words of a former NAHS member Michelle Anderson, "When I first started NAHS I was a sophomore. I remember being very timid going in but as the years progressed I found that the people who were also a part of NAHS were people I could call my friends." The same attitude is shared by new member Erica Lane. "Art to me is a huge part of my life and I love improving myself and learning new things. I'm really glad NAHS exists because it's a group of people that feel the same way." Michelle is currently attending the New Hampshire Institute of Art in Manchester, NH, and plans to earn her BFA/art teaching certificate to follow her dreams and art goals. Erica is a sophomore at MHS and I look forward to seeing her dedicate herself to the arts and grow with our chapter.

Throughout the years our chapter has chosen diversified projects and volunteer activities to support. We have done the all-admired face painting, craft fairs, art exhibits, Santa swaps, pumpkin decorating, bake sales, and more, to raise money for shirts, art-embedded field trips, and other expenses. These activities are good ways to bring our group to our school community and create the art family that we are. However, I admire most the depth of the cultural activities the students have chosen to do in the past. During our first year as a chapter we took on a Malaria awareness campaign in which we held a silent art auction to raise money to buy bed nets. We were able to donate hundreds of dollars to the United Nations Foundation. In proceeding years we hand-illustrated children's coloring books and the proceeds were donated to the Make a Wish Foundation. We also brought awareness to the presidential electoral year by silk-screening candidate tee shirts in conjunction with the Andy Warhol "Pop Politics" exhibit at the Currier Museum in Manchester, NH. This activity made the front paper of our Telegraph. In addition, our chapter is in its third year of hosting Empty Bowls. When I asked former members to consider what was a good memory, graduating President Sadie Tupper said, "I remember how great Empty Bowls was and how well it went. From cleaning a soup spill in my car to seeing how many people came out and supported! It was a great time and I can't wait to come see it all happen again this year!" Sadie recently returned to MHS to introduce herself to our current chapter and invite them to different volunteer activities. This is a true testament to the leadership qualities that a NAHS member can develop when being part of our chapter.

"During our first year as a chapter we took on a Malaria awareness campaign in which we held a silent art auction to raise money to buy bed nets. We were able to donate hundreds of dollars to the United Nations Foundation."

Finally, our chapter has redefined our school spirit by painting the Merrimack Tomahawk logo in the main lobby and school gymnasium. We have also painted murals at our public library, local kindergarten, and VFW. Our reputation has caught on in such a way that the Merrimack chamber of commerce connected us to a local stomping ground, the Homestead restaurant. The manager of the Homestead, Mike McDonough, wanted our members to create an image to be painted on the restaurant's historic silo that could be seen from Interstate 3. It was a terrific opportunity for members to see how far-reaching their art could be and learn to network with the public. Last year the chapter signed up to work on another far-reaching project, "One Million Bones." We met the state representative of this project, Rachel Belmont, who spoke at our Induction Ceremony as our keynote. Rachel worked with our members all year long to make ceramic bones. These bones were exhibited at Phillips Exeter Academy and then shipped to Washington, DC, to be displayed on the Mall. The sheer mass of the number of bones expressed to the public the magnitude of human atrocities committed in our world. Although grim, it was quite powerful and showed how art could bring awareness to an important issue.

On a personal note, I lost my 14-year-old yellow Labrador, Cole, last year. As he aged he lost the use of his back legs, so I researched wheelchairs for dogs. It happened that one of the leading companies for manufacturing such devices was headquartered in my hometown, Nashua, NH. Cole used his wheels for a while, but age got the better of him. Around this time Hurricane Sandy hit the east coast. Thousands were in need. I received a link from our chapter's president, Chase Tarranova, to a small article in the Huffington Post asking for blankets for displaced animals. The shelters were overrun and they hadn't the simplest comforts. The project was called "Sew for Sandy." On a whim I reached out to Handicapped Pets, the company that made Cole's wheelchair, and asked if they could help us get supplies for this project. The company not only gave us the money to purchase fabric to make blankets, they invited Chase to meet the owner and plugged the project on their website. I felt that this project helped me recover and, in a way, was in memory of Cole. I could only hope that my students and members are able to connect real life events, the importance of making a difference, and how useful their talents can be in this way.

In conclusion, thanks to our art department at Merrimack High. They are a wonderful group of workers that love art and what they do helping to model to members this passion. I thank our school administration for supporting the visual arts and considering our society for all sorts of projects. I thank all of the members I have had in the past. I remember each of you for different reasons. You helped shape our Merrimack High School chapter and made it what it is today. I thank you for your graciousness and your respect of one another. I thank you for your service to our school and community and dedication to art. I hope that each of you continues to keep art in your life and use your creativity to help you live a long healthy life.

FAIRHOPE HIGH SCHOOL, FAIRHOPE (#696)

Fairhope has started the year off with one of our favorite service projects! This is our second year of the Senior to Senior activity for high school juniors and seniors to do art projects with our community's senior citizens at The Brennity assisted living home and AHEPA, a government assisted senior living center. With local artist Nancy Rain leading the way, students make unique pieces of art with the golden agers, whether it's painting guardian angels or making cards for the troops. Most importantly, Senior to Senior gives our Greatest Generation the opportunity to express themselves in art, and students the pleasure of getting to hear stories from WWII vets and residents in their 90s with so much history to share.

Members working on the Grinchmas panel: Ansley Gwin, Caroline Nelson, Bonnie Wallace.

Mrs. Nancy Raia, who is an art therapist at the Eastern Shore Art Center, is also involved with our club in blue jean painting. (Students take a pair of jeans and paint scenes of dancers, musicians, and actors in support of keeping arts in schools.) She will be taking these jeans to Washington, DC to lobby for the arts later this year!

Locally, our chapter helped with Daphne's Jubilee Festival this September. Members helped children make fish prints and wood sculptures and paint pumpkins. We also painted faces and assisted the artists as needed. In October, NAHS helped with Celebration Church's annual "Shindig." Members helped with the blow-up slides and the bounce houses.

Another project we are excited to participate in is Fairhope's First Annual Grinchmas! Town merchants come together for the whole month of December to bring the Christmas spirit to downtown Fairhope through the heart-warming story we all love, How the Grinch Stole Christmas. Fine Furnishings, a local furniture store, has requested artwork from the Eastern Shore schools to go along with all of the Grinchmas festivities. Fairhope High School has been assigned the scene of the Grinch celebrating the Spirit of Christmas, and our 4' x 8' panel will be displayed in the store's window December 10–25.

Throughout the year we will continue making cards for the brave men and women serving our country, as well as "get well" cards for patients at Thomas Hospital.

Wishing everyone a wonderful year!

Tatnall's NAHS Students Visit The Barnes Foundation in Philadelphia.

On Friday, October 11, 21 NAHS students visited the Barnes Foundation in Philadelphia. Sometimes referred to as "The Greatest Collection You Have Never Heard Of," the Barnes houses the best examples of post-Impressionist art in the world, in addition to examples of both fine and decorative arts from many different cultures and periods. The NAHS students have studied the collection's history and its controversial move from its original location in Merion, Pennsylvania to the Benjamin Franklin Parkway in downtown Philadelphia. In addition, students are currently working on a related studio project requiring them to choose a piece from the collection and use it as a point of departure to create their own original work of art. In conjunction with the project, students have also examined the difference between "inspiration" and "imitation," reading overviews of several cases of alleged copyright infringement by contemporary artists including Richard Prince and Sherry Levine. A special exhibition of the students' "Barnes-inspired" pieces will be on view in Tatnall's Beekley Gallery Lobby in early November. For their Service Initiative this year, Tatnall's NAHS Chapter has partnered with Nemours-Alfred I. duPont Hospital for Children and have prepared a series of fun and engaging art projects to do with the residents there. A.I. duPont serves children facing terminal illness and conditions requiring long-term hospitalization. Several of our NAHS members are interested in pursuing Art Therapy as a possible career path so our partnership will also provide them with real world, first-hand experience working with children.

CAIRO AMERICAN COLLEGE, CAIRO (#5735530)

National Art Honor Society chapter has been newly introduced to Cairo American College, Egypt. Never before have we had such a prestigious society that recognizes the Visual Arts on our campus. We are 27 members strong, along with the support of our sponsor, we are thrilled to be a part of this celebration of art. NAHS is personally meaningful for every member because living in Egypt, especially at this time, the atmosphere has been more or less hopeless due to the ongoing political instability. Knowing that the artwork we produce can help inspire people who have been truly desperate instills a very energetic and positive attitude amongst the group. One of our dominant roles is to demonstrate the value of art in our school and the greater community. Under the direction of our sponsor Ms. Azarea Dzinic, the following members have been elected to leadership roles: President Farida Radwan, Vice President Zeina Kotb, Secretary Dana Saba and Treasurer Gina Berdux. Our induction ceremony, held on November 13, 2013, established our new chapter and officially recognized NAHS in our school's community. We are eager to light the physical flames that metaphorically represent the hope and inspiration we hope to fuel in our community. Our year together, as the first ever NAHS at CAC Cairo American College, will begin with a fundraiser, the "color wheel cupcake" bake sale, to raise money for SPARE Animal Shelter. Starting off the 2013–14 chapter year with a burst of color, we are excited to create an identity in our school society.

Students working on Apron Project and cards for Wounded Warriors.

The Flanagan NAHS is full of ambitious and talented artists. The students of Flanagan NAHS use their love and talent of art to help out their community and their school. Some of the service projects the Flanagan NAHS plans to do throughout the year include making cards to send to Wounded Warriors, which provides service to injured soldiers, and decorate backpacks for a local orphanage. Not only do the members of Flanagan's NAHS aspire to help out their community, they also use their artistic ability to help out their school as well as the future generation of NAHS members. One of the projects the members have been working on throughout the year so far is painting of aprons. These aprons will be sold at the end of the year at the school's art fair. All the earnings will go to benefit Flanagan's NAHS the following year. Flanagan's NAHS isn't just a great organization that helps out their community, it is also a place for kids with a similar love for art to hang out and have a good time together.

The NAHS students of Holy Trinity Episcopal Academy continue to use their love of art to reach out to the community in which they live. Last spring the NAHS students held their fourth Empty Bowls dinner to raise money for the Melbourne South Brevard Sharing Center, a food bank and resource center for families in need. A secondary benefit for the dinner was to raise the funds necessary to purchase art supplies for this year's project, Birthday Bags. The Birthday Bags are an idea that grew from the students' awareness that many children in poorer neighborhoods are remembered at Christmas time when they receive presents from all sorts of groups, yet birthdays may be passed over. The president, Isabela Rovira, and vice president, Vanessa Panicia, were instrumental in planning what art materials the group would purchase and throwing a "packing party." After the Birthday Bags were assembled, a gift tag was tied on that read "Once a Fine Arts Student, Always a Fine Arts Student; Happy Birthday from Holy Trinity's National Art Honor Society." Each Birthday Bag was packed with the essentials to create art: a sketchbook, set of watercolors, sketching pencil set, and markers. As Isabela explained, "This gives each student who receives a Birthday Bag a sense of ownership in their art because they have their very own supplies." Vanessa said that "Art is a great way for kids to develop their own voice." The Birthday Bags were taken to the Dorcas Outreach Center for Kids who will give them out when a child in their program has a birthday. They have already given out bags to very happy and excited children who were eager to start creating their art.

LAKE BRANTLEY HIGH SCHOOL, ALTAMONTE SPRINGS

Our chapter of NAHS is grounded in community service. We participate in can drives, charity, and volunteerism, all without missing a chance to incorporate our individual artistic talents. Facepainting during Homecoming Week has become one of our club's many creative service opportunities which has proven overwhelmingly successful in the past, all with reasonable prices that please everyone. Best of all, all of our proceeds are donated toward a local charity. As for can drives, we advertise ourselves with club-designed posters. Besides these traditions, our chapter has also dedicated itself to working across mediums through cooperation with the chorus and theater departments. For example, Lake Brantley's chorus presents a show called "Brantley on Broadway" every May, and our chapter always helps to paint the canvases used to decorate the stage. Even though these activities have been creative and challenging, by far our club's biggest undertaking has been designing our school's café.

Lake Brantley opened its café last year, and it was an expensive venture. One way for the school to cut costs was to solicit our chapter for help in designing and painting the café. Several of our members were responsible for designing the café's logo, branding, and mural. Many members helped paint the inside and choose the color scheme. The café was a major source of pride for the school's administration once it opened, and our club was happy to help make it a reality.

A new undertaking for this school year has been painting murals for many of Lake Brantley's teachers. One history teacher requested an American history-themed mural for his classroom, and since then, subsequent requests have poured in. We are currently working on several murals, determined to make all of them a reality by the end of the school year. All of this is done free of charge, as an act of service.

[At time of this writing] we are also working on our own Homecoming decorations for Spirit Week. Our banner is of particular importance as an opportunity to showcase the club's diverse artistic talent. We have been working on it already for several weeks, and the date for completion is fast approaching. As usual, "good" is never "good enough" for our chapter of NAHS. Our goal is to make the rest of the student body know that everyone in our club is dedicated to art and loves to design and to create.

Our NAHS officers: Raquel Lovelace- President; Gabi Ortiz- Vice President; Chelsea Mulligan- Historian; Katiana Bague- Secretary; Siobhan Marks- Treasurer; Joanna Maroney- Parliamentarian.

Our club's visit to the St. Petersburg College Crossroads Gallery and studios.

One of the most interesting parts of being a member of Largo High School's NAHS is our field trips. We go to local art museums, galleries, studios, and colleges to explore the art that is in our community. We learn where and how to find art opportunities such as classes, art openings, exhibitions, and festivals wherever we go. We volunteer at various art exhibits and also get an inside look at being able to further our art careers and interests after graduating from high school.

Port Charlotte High School's chapter is in its 12th year of NAHS and we're making it the best yet! Through invitations and our previous dedicated members, we have a total of 26 creative NAHS-ians this 2013-2014 school year! In the short, first two months of this school year, our members have each created two successful pieces in which they have displayed in our community's monthly Gallery Walk in the lively downtown Punta Gorda, Florida that showcases local art galleries. In October, we celebrated the holiday season with art festivities that provoked creative ideas and group alliances. Our group has recently donated through the money raised from face painting to the American Heart Association in our school's "Red-Out" event to create awareness of heart disease in our community. We are currently firing handmade, clay bowls that we will donate to Empty Bowls, a society that feeds the hungry in our area, which combines both beautiful artwork and community involvements.

We look forward to the rest of the year, growing closer to our members, making a difference in our town, and exposing the arts to everyone around!

Artistic minds celebrated another success at Port St. Joe Jr./Sr. High School. Teacher Julie Hodges officially opened the school's chapter of the National Art Honor Society (NAHS), an organization that will allow creative students an alternative way to graduate with honors based on artistic proficiency and merit. Membership in the organization signifies that through effort, positive attitude and sense of dedication in the study of art, these students have made valuable contributions to the school, community and society. By opening a chapter, Hodges will be informed of area art shows and will give the students a larger platform to showcase their work.

"I'm trying to bring things in that bigger schools offer," said Hodges, who will act as the faculty sponsor. "Port St. Joe may be a small school, but we have a big talent pool." Hodges said that her own high school had an NAHS chapter and she believes that it gave her an outlet to strive toward excelling in art. Hodges handpicked the students who would have the first opportunity to join based on their passion and talent. "This is another way that students who are interested in pursuing art-related careers can build their applications for colleges," said Hodges.

Volunteer hours are required for members, most of which will be completed during school. Upcoming projects include collaborations with the Bridges program, the Gulf County Health Department and celebrations in honor of Veteran's Day. Hodges said that the new chapter will be recognized in the monthly NAHS newsletter.

The National Art Honor Society was founded in 1978 and specifically designed for high school students in grades 9-12. The program is meant to inspire and recognize students who have shown an outstanding ability and interest in art. The NAHS strives to aid members in attaining the highest standards in art scholarship, character, and service, and to bring art education to the attention of the school and community. Students gain peer recognition, leadership growth opportunities, college and career preparation, and an unmatched sense of camaraderie.

ROYAL PALM BEACH HIGH SCHOOL, ROYAL PALM BEACH (#2619)

Royal Palm Beach Homecoming preparations.

Royal Palm Beach Homecoming float.

The gift of creativity! So far this has been an exciting school year for Royal Palm Beach High School's National Art Honor Society. This year our President is Sydney Tate, Vice-President Courtney Blanchard, Secretary Shakuan Frankson, and our Treasurer is Alex Holmstock. Since spring we hosted our school's Wildcat Present and Future Exhibit, displaying the artwork of local elementary and middle school kids at our high school. In April we formed a team for Relay For Life. Our members walked and held a bake sale all night, to raise over $700 for the American Cancer Society. Also we held our Spring Art Exhibit, and Senior Awards, and we had another induction ceremony where we welcomed new members who are excited for what NAHS has in store for them. This is our largest membership we've ever had. Just recently we participated in our school's Homecoming week which proved that hard work does pay off because we participated in the homecoming parade, banner competition, and tailgate party. Our theme for our parade float and banners were "Despicable Me" Minions painting graffiti. We made costumes so our members could dress up as Minions for the parade. We won first place in the float competition, for our float was decorated with colorful balloons and paint cans we recycled and painted and we gave out candy. Also we placed first in the banner competition which we made two—one was a picture of the Minions going crazy, hiding in paint cans and splattering paint everywhere. In the center was NAHS in splattered paint and a wildcat symbolizing our school mascot. The second banner consisted of the Minions going crazy, but in a little bit more of a subtle direction where we also included Agnes and Gru. To wind up the week we painted people's school pride on their face and arms at the Tailgate party before the big football game. Most recently our President Sydney Tate won the t-shirt design competition for the Race for the Art 5K for the second year in a row. Race for the Arts is a 5K run and a 4K Color Run which raises funds to support art programs in Palm Beach County. We and several other schools go out to volunteer early in the morning with organizing events at the race. There are many new and exciting activities planned for the rest of the year. Stay tuned for future details.

SEBRING HIGH SCHOOL, SEBRING (#2454)

Abstract Canvas Painting.

Pinwheels for Peace.

From face painting to abstract canvas art to pinwheels, Sebring High School's National Art Honor Society has been very busy from the start. In September we had already started getting calls for different projects we could do—the first of them was a large abstract canvas painting. We painted four 3-by-4 ft canvases and five, 10-by-30 ft, canvases; our members really had a blast. Even before that some of our members had already started. Our Vice President, Makayla Patterson, painted over 150 band plumes for their October performances, for which she put in more than 15 hours of work. Also Dominique Juliano painted more than 20 wooden lightning "streaks" to be hung around our school pool, for which she put in more than 10 hours of work. In addition to our amazing members' hard work on their own, we have also done many face-painting events together. We face painted for our high school's homecoming week, for a local elementary school's Fall Fun Fest, and for various church family events. We stuck over 25 handmade pinwheels in the ground in the shape of a peace sign to make a statement to support world peace. In addition, Sebring High School is proud to present our 2013-14 National Art Honor society's officers: Lacey Clark, President; Makayla Patterson, Vice President; Amanda Rios, Secretary; Dallynette Padros, Art Director; and Destinee Ellis, Historian.

In addition to all the hard work we have already put in, our biggest fundraiser and event is coming up. Our local Panera Bread sponsors our club with 10% of their profit to our club for as long as we are there. While we are there, we face paint, sell ceramics and show student artwork. It's our largest fundraiser, and we are very thankful to our local Panera Bread. We have a very large event where we raise money for a local child suffering from hard times, which we call Soup Up the Arts. Soup Up is in February and we are constantly prepping and working to ensure a fun night for all. Last, but certainly not least, are our incredibly hard-working Teacher Sponsors, Mr. S. Van Dam, and Mr. J. Van Dam; without whom we could not accomplish what we do, and to whom we say "thank you."

Right: Early arrivals for the Black and White Gala, an art exhibit and evening of celebrating the visual arts.

The Greater Atlanta Christian School chapter of NAHS has a full calendar of events for the 2013-14 school year. Major activities include: Helping with Homecoming decorations in October; Judging Elementary Art during Book Week in November; and helping with a holiday community event, hosted by GACS on their campus, called "Let's Light the Night." Members provide gifts for foster children and needy elderly residents of an assisted living facility during the holiday season. We develop friendships by enjoying a club-wide holiday dinner, competing in a "cupcake war" competition, using themes from famous artworks, and participation in field trips to the High Museum in Atlanta, on location work in Dahlonega, GA, and viewing exhibits at the Michael C. Carlos Museum at Emory University.

This year we host the 10th Annual Black and White Gala! This event is special in so many ways: it teaches students about being consumers of the arts, educates students about expectations on attire and behavior at formal cultural arts events, gives a venue for celebrating and sharing students' creative talents and gifts, plants seeds so students can think of ways to use their talents and gifts to help society, and prepares college-bound art students in all aspects of executing an art exhibition. This event gives students practice in collaboration, leadership, organization, and execution in planning an art exhibition. The Black and White Gala is an amazing way for students to use their knowledge, internalize for understanding, apply, analyze, and evaluate the information, and, most exciting of all, to create!

NG NAHS Induction Ceremony.

We have been super busy this fall participating in our "Art with Purpose" activities where we give back to the community through our talent and skills. We have face painted at all of the home football games, raising over $400 for charities so far! We have written and taught art lessons with special education members at the Next Stop—last month we helped them make "I happy I houses." We have painted and collaged two doors for the county "Doors to Homes and Hope" exhibit, giving back to our local Habitat for Humanity. We have worked hard collecting items for our local food bank during the Gwinnett County Great Days of Service event—together we brought in over 700 items, and the local newspaper did an article on our "compassion in action!" We created the table decorations for the GAEA Fall Conference in Savannah. It was a masquerade ball theme, so our centerpieces were titled: "You Can't MASK our Creativity!" We will be attending the Shepherd Spinal Center's Fall Festival to bring art to those spending time in the hospital... and we continue to exhibit our art throughout our school and community! One of our most exciting events was participating in the Suwanee Day Parade where we won first place for the Most Creative float! We incorporated the theme, Celebrating Past, Present and Future through the ARTS! Our chapter induction was held on September 26 and we had a beautiful candlelight ceremony with over 70 members in attendance.

We look forward to a busy spring, continuing to work together to bring art to others. For more information please visit our website: www.ngnahs.weebly.com

The painted windows were then placed on a wall in these interior classrooms to add ambience and aesthetic awareness to the classrooms; (2) Members went to our feeder elementary school and contributed by doing face painting for the elementary students at their pancake breakfast fundraiser; and (3) Members will provide face painting at the "Titan Fest" activities on March 29, 2014—a carnival at school.

Several NAHS members won Gold Key awards from the Scholastic Art Awards Regional Competition: Kaylee Bahk, Sophia Chen, Arulita Gupta, Taylor Manigault, Olivia Park, and Priscilla Pun. Members who won Silver Keys: Michelle Chen, Hakyoung Jeong, Olivia Park, and Priscilla Pun. Olivia Park participated and won 2nd Place and Honorable Mention for her artwork in the North Fulton Art Show, sponsored by the Roswell Visual Arts Center and The Roswell Fine Arts Alliance. Michelle Chen, Hakyoung Jeong, and Sophia Chen were all interviewed locally and were asked to continue to state level interviews for the Georgia Governor's Honors Art Program that is housed at Valdosta State University and held over a 5-week period this summer. If accepted, these students will study art with high school students from all over the state of Georgia.

PARKVIEW HIGH SCHOOL, LILBURN (#29)

Door on Chick-fil-A painted for Parkview by NAHS members.

Here at Parkview High School, NAHS is always busy. We started off with a project given to us by the school to motivate more students to graduate, called "Destination Graduation." Our job was to create a banner, aimed mostly at freshmen, to inform them they can select different pathways to graduation. A design was drawn up by our very own Vice-President, Christina Pham. Many of the NAHS members stayed after school and worked together to paint on a large canvas for this project. "Destination Graduation" isn't quite finished yet, but with the help of our members, we can create something to admire and inspire!

Parkview's NAHS is spreading school spirit all the way to Chick-fil-A! A few students collaborated to paint the windows of our local Chick-fil-A orange and blue. They worked in the heat for not only the benefit of showing school spirit, but free ice cream and coupons, as well.

Many of our members that specialize in painting were given a certain task as we prepared for the semester to come. They painted mini canvases that were sold in an auction to raise money for the GAEA conference. The canvases were 3x3" and decorated with an individual design. Needless to say, our members did a great job painting each and every one of them.

After several weeks and shifts in deadlines, we have finally chosen a t-shirt design. Four were submitted, and after counting up the votes, it was clear which design was the winner. Our Co-President, Selina Pham, created the design, which is an artistic cat painting the letters "NAHS" on a canvas. The shirts will be ordered for all official members with the colors orange and blue to show our school pride. T-shirt designs were also submitted for "Shuttersense." This is a t-shirt used to represent the Gwinnett County School's photography exhibit. Our photography teacher, Mrs. Scott, will decide on the best design from the ones submitted.

Our most recent activity is development of a fundraiser. We plan on creating yarn pouches for cell phones and holding a workshop for members. The workshop will include teaching everyone how to make them and creating several for future use in a fundraiser. Aside from making money for NAHS, the most important thing is to have fun!

The Union Grove High School NAHS chapter began its fall semester strongly. Members worked to build a scarecrow based on Edvard Munch's The Scream. They developed an artist with the legs of an easel, a torso made of Munch's famous painting, and the head of the famed screamer himself collaboratively from initial conception to the final product. NAHS members not only worked together, but their scarecrow also became a part of the Atlanta Botanical Garden's October 2013 "Scarecrows in the Garden" event, a showcase of over 150 original scarecrows. Additionally, the Union Grove chapter hosted its semi-annual art camp November 2nd. In conjunction with the UGHS Art Club, members taught elementary school aged children through four projects with a variety of media. Two weeks later, veteran members welcomed new inductees at a ceremony on November 12. Students exhibited their own artworks, mingled with refreshments in hand, and recited the pledge. Being in school for less than one semester, the Union Grove NAHS has established its 2013-2014 with vigor and plans to reflect this spring semester.

BHS Memory Project Workshop Students with Finished Portraits.

This year was Burlington High School's first year as a NAHS Chapter! Highlights of the year included field trips and workshops with artists, as well as numerous service projects. The club painted two murals: a steampunk greyhound for the school and one for the local pet shelter. Students created portraits for the Memory Project during a daylong workshop with a local portrait painter. Throughout the entire year, artworks were created with a winged theme—Wings for Angels (see wingsforangels.org)—and sold during our Spring Art Expo. Proceeds from the art sale were sent to Camp Courageous for art supplies. This camp is a year-round recreational/respite center for children with disabilities. BHS members also participated in and won awards in the Scholastic Competition as well as Iowa Visual All-State. During the 2013 school year, the club made and displayed Peace Flags for the International Day of Peace and created art pieces with the theme "Dreamscapes" for a juried Halloween exhibit. Homecoming brought a night of face painting with the theme of "Catch a Falling Star". (See photo)

The Jennings County High School chapter of NAHS has been super busy since May. young children painting handprints on their new van in July. Members also worked on a mural and signs for the animal shelter. The largest project of the summer and in the history of JCHS chapter of NAHS was a project for the Muscatatuck Urban Training Center (MUTC) in which graduates and current members created 50 murals from 4 x 4 feet to 4 x 8 feet, with a variety of themes from brutal dictatorships to Chicago-style graffiti and street art. Students studied both styles and fulfilled the order! It was a challenge and they surpassed it.

PLEASURE RIDGE PARK HIGH SCHOOL, LOUISVILLE (#273)

Louisville students traveled to Indy to tour the blockbuster exhibition, Matisse: Life in Color.

Matisse helped to change the rules of art through his bold use of color, form, and space.

Pleasure Ridge Park High School's NAHS Chapter is Off to a Colorful Start! NAHS students from Louisville's Pleasure Ridge Park High School recently traveled to the Indianapolis Museum of Art to tour the blockbuster exhibition, Matisse: Life in Color, Masterworks from the Baltimore Museum. Bright colors, bold shapes, and expressive lines make the work of Henri Matisse (French, 1869-1954) some of the most influential—and recognizable—of the 20th century. Matisse aimed to discover the "essential character of things," and students learned how Matisse's stylistic innovations fundamentally altered the course of modern art. The exhibit concluded with original illustrations from Matisse's famous artist book, Jazz (1947), featuring the simplified shapes and colors of his paper cutout technique. After their tour, students also saw masterpieces in the IMAs permanent collection by Cézanne, Gauguin, van Gogh, Georgia O'Keeffe, Picasso, Rembrandt and others. Favorites among students were the Asian artworks on exhibit and the Contemporary Gallery on the fourth floor of the museum.

PRESENTATION ACADEMY, LOUISVILLE (#287)

Members tie-dye this year's t-shirts with pink and orange dye.

Members work to fold more origami paper cranes towards the 1,000 they plan to send to Japan.

This is the seventh year for NAHS at Presentation Academy and the members have received more opportunities to be active in the school and the community. This year's chapter includes 19 members, with officers: Hannah McGhee, president; Hannah Brown, vice president; and Tiffany Lakhwani, secretary. The school year started off with NAHS tie-dyeing the t-shirts they designed. NAHS has a white t-shirt every year with a design in black ink. The members then vote on two colors (this year bright pink and orange) and from there, they tie-dye their t-shirts. Members are currently working on a couple of signs to go outside the building for CrossRoads Ministry. Per CrossRoads website: "The primary goal of CrossRoads Ministry is to develop and provide new models for retreats for people using outreach and service experiences that bring to life the message of Catholic social teaching." It is located on the campus of St. William's Church, which is parish in the Archdiocese of Louisville and pulls participants from local schools and churches. Other projects NAHS is involved in this semester are creating artist trading cards that illustrate the theme "self-portrait" to be exchanged with a school in Michigan, making 1,000 paper cranes to send to the peace monument in Hiroshima, Japan, and participating in The Memory Project by developing portraits of orphans from Cambodia and Nepal. NAHS members are also planning on exhibiting their artwork in a show at a local business called Regalo, on 4th Street in Downtown Louisville. These pieces will be on display during the First Friday Trolley Hop in January.

Cameras were re-loaded and given to BPR residents to take photos that will be picked up and developed by NAHS members.

Painting Murals: Students are painting murals above the lockers to reflect the school's core values Leadership, Reverence, Service, and Community. Currently the Senior hall, first floor 8 sections, is being completed. Also, students will be working during open house to help guest with a make-and-take booth in the art and photo wing.

Art is above all else an expressive medium, and it has recently been utilized by the National Art Honor Society Chapter 2953 at the Carver Center for Arts and Technology to express gratitude to U.S. Army soldiers this past Veterans Day.

On November 11th a total of 19 portraits of active duty soldiers were delivered to Fort Riley, Kansas. Along with the portraits, the chapter's advisor, Mr. Carroll Cook, traveled over 1,200 miles to personally present each piece of art. While the artists couldn't all make the impressive journey, they were each able to speak directly with the servicemen through a Skype video conference. As the plethora of portraits were unveiled, and a breadth of styles ranging from traditional graphite to blue ink revealed themselves each artist took an opportunity to express appreciation to the soldiers for their service and some personal insights about their portraits.

However, the students weren't the only ones who were grateful. Upon receiving his portrait and hearing the artist speak, Specialist Verdugo, one of the 19 servicemen, expressed his gratefulness: "It means a lot, not only to myself but to all of my friends, to know that people back home were taking an interest in us." As the ceremony wound to an end, Specialist Verdugo spoke again, "We're all a family here, as you can see, and some of us have moved on," he said, in reference to the changes within the group which occurred during the project. "But now you've become part of our family by giving us these gifts."

The heartfelt finale was appropriate for the ambitious several months long project. Since the projects inception last spring, students of all grade levels have worked to complete their selected soldier's portraits. Speaking with the servicemen solidifies the impact of the project not only on the artists but also as a symbol of gratitude to both veterans and active military personnel.

NORTH COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL, GLEN BURNIE (#3416)

The North County chapter of NAHS is accomplishing tons and making noise within our community as we start off the year. Our work is easily spotted around our school, whether it is being sported by faculty or students or proudly displayed in classrooms. As well as popular, NAHS is equally philanthropic, donating all funds raised to other clubs and student scholarships. One of our projects in particular has become very sought after at our school—the mini masterpiece. Twice every year our club recreates some of the most famous works of art in miniature form. Bidding wars are held for each miniature masterpiece and sold for the highest price. They are so popular often school staff rushes to the art show to make sure they secure their favorite works, we've even seen faculty hire agents or representatives to bid in their place, buying pieces for as much as $50. At the end of the show all the money raised is donated to our end of the year student scholarships. NAHS work still manages to go far beyond just our own benefit in art shows. We were responsible for four homecoming murals this October based on great cities around the world and celebratory events about the school. Just recently we raised over $100 in support of "Don't Hate Collaborate" our school's very own anti-bullying club. The money was raised through our making of "Shrinky Dinks Pins," quirky drawings and slogans on special paper that shrinks when heated; they sold out in a week. Additionally, the pins sold for $1.50 each, so we think raising over $100 is quite a big deal.

Our Chapter has grown large with many inducted, yet never faltering in dedication. North County NAHS is a group filled with friendly dedicated members who simply love art. It has birthed future art school students and art enthusiasts alike. It is a place that humbles those who stand out in even the most advanced of art classes as well as being a Chapter that inspires others through admiration of their peers. Our officers are kind and dependable, and leaders are fun-loving and knowledgeable; North County NAHS is a big happy art-loving family, and we are off to a great start!

NOTRE DAME PREPARATORY SCHOOL, TOWSON (#1956)

The Notre Dame Prep Chapter of the National Art Honor Society continues to participate in art competitions and service projects in school and out! One of the most popular activities is the annual "Memory Project," where students use different mediums to create a portrait for a child who is "neglected, orphaned, or disadvantaged" (www.memoryproject.org). Another way students help the disadvantaged is by making sock monkeys that are distributed to children at the Baltimore shelter for women and children who are victims of domestic abuse, Sarah's Hope. Students also participated in an art competition hosted by Shepard Pratt called "Love Your Tree." Students were to create a piece that promotes a healthy body image. Natasha Szymkiewicz ('15) received first prize in this competition for her piece "Like a tree, my body is UNIQUE." In addition, a group of students participated in the Kennedy Krieger Festival of Trees Gingerbread House Competition and walked away with first prize. The girls created a gingerbread house that resembled Hogwarts, from the Harry Potter book and movie series. A member of this group, Edina Hiser ('15), said "it was so cool to see all the creative things other people made... and it gets you into the holiday spirit."

Honor society members are also given the opportunity to use their artistic talents within the school community. One of the many ways students do this is through set painting for the fall and spring drama productions. In addition, students paint murals, decorate posters and bulletin boards, and create backdrops for school events. One of the most exciting events that the Honor Society students developed was the Green Carpet Fashion Show. Now an annual event, students plan and create an outfit made entirely of recycled materials. In past years, designers have made dresses out of bottle caps, puzzle pieces, newspaper, and beans. This takes place during the annual school-wide Art Week. Honor society members organize this week and include many activities including bake sales, art shows, and face painting. So far, the NDP Art Honor Society is planning some new and exciting events for the upcoming year!

SOUTHERN SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL, HARWOOD (#2129)

Lighting the World Purple on October 10 for Amanda Todd and World Mental Health Day!

To say there's never been a more exciting time to be a student artist at Southern High School is an UNDERSTATEMENT! This spring, Mr. Michael Bell, the Chapter's Sponsor since 2002, received the NAE's 2013 National Sponsor of the Year Award, and his fourth student, Cat Allen, received the NAE's 2013 National Rising Star Award. This only added to our momentum as Southern's NAHS earned over $2 million in scholarship offers.

South County Rec Center Public Art Mural for Anne Arundel County.

accounting for 1/3 of the entire School's scholarship offers for the third year in a row.

From there, we took time from our end-of-school activities and came together to create a special mural for the Anne Arundel County Department of Recreation and Parks South County Recreation Center. "We've been extremely active each year creating public art murals and giving back to the community," Bell said. "This was by far the largest scale mural I've done with our students, but also one of the most successful. I hope it helps bring more attention to the South County Recreation Center and gives the participating students a sense of belonging." The mural was painted on the exterior wall and the entrance area of the center at 4510 Owensville-Sudley Road. It is intended to be a colorful illustration of life in South County and the activities offered at the center. Southern's NAHS also partnered with local professional artists from the Muddy Creek Artists Guild, who worked alongside the students and contributed their time to the mural making it a truly collaborative project.

"Then, October rolled around. Anti-bullying awareness and domestic violence awareness month brought our NAHS together to help spark a nationwide Purple Thursday movement where everyone in our NAHS (and school, including teachers and Administrators) all wore purple on Thursday, October 10, in honor of World Mental Health Day and in honor of the one-year anniversary of Port Coquitlam, B.C. teen Amanda Todd's suicide. Amanda Todd was a beautiful 15-year-old, who after years of enduring cyberbullying and real-life life bullying, took her own life on October 10, 2012. One month prior to her suicide, Amanda posted a chilling video on YouTube to share her cyberbullying experience. Mr. Bell was deeply touched after hearing about Amanda's life and death. Working through his emotions, he began painting a portrait of Amanda Todd and included his NAHS Officers in the making of the painting, as another truly collaborative project they later sent to Carol Todd, mother of the fallen teen.

Our goal as a National Art Honor Society was to bring awareness to issues of bullying and cyber-bullying, and to keep Amanda Todd's memory alive, for our students, and for Amanda's family. This message carried over into this year to our NAHS student artists as they remembered Amanda Todd's death and led the charge of sharing our message of doing something creative as opposed to destructive with what life throws your way. This took form in our "Purple Thursday" movement. Amanda's mom, Carol Todd, said: "I have lost one child, but know she wanted her story to save 1,000 more." You can see the short film that goes behind the scenes of Southern's NAHS making of the painting honoring Amanda Todd and see the final portrait at <http://youtube.com/mbellart> and can visit our NAHS art page on facebook at <http://facebook.com/artquest>.

This is our National Art Honor Society crossing international borders for the greater good of humanity. This Christmas we helped the Los Angeles Good Shepherd Domestic Violence Shelter, making our annual handmade sketchbooks to donate to the women and children in the shelter's creative arts class.

NAHS Members window painting in the community of St. Michaels for fall festivities.

St. Michaels Middle High School chapter of The National Art Honor Society consists of a significant portion of our small student body from all backgrounds and interests with the one common thread of loving art and creative expression. Art is a tool for communication, which is celebrated within our halls, bringing students together for common causes and creating a sense of unity amongst groups of students, staff, and the local population. At SMMHS students instill the importance of art and artmaking by not only creating personal pieces but also collaborative transdisciplinary installations that serve a conceptual purpose while providing beauty for the visitors of our halls. Art For Social Justice was a theme within our first installation of the school year dedicated to the 50th Anniversary of the Walk on Washington with a collaborative painting created by students honoring Dr. Martin Luther King. A school-wide installation was also created to commemorate the events of 9/11 entitled "The SMMHS Resilience". This installation honored the unsung heroes of 9/11, the watermen who came to the rescue of the thousands of stranded shortly after the attacks on the World Trade Center. This story hit close to home as our community thrives on the hard work and dedication of the local watermen in the fishing and crabbing industry with most of these men/women family members of our students.

Our chapter is very involved with the community around us and the Town of St. Michaels not only supports the fine arts in education but also allows students to fuse their talent with service learning. "Fall Into St. Michaels" is an annual event where SMMHS students participate with painting the local business' windows and participating in Pumpkin Carving at the community center. Our school community is also of great importance as St. Michaels Middle High is dedicated to the cause to end bullying. To promote this cause, Art students created Keith Haring-inspired figures to spread the mission of this initiative with banners that adorn the hallways to remind students to stay committed to our cause.

Other events occurring this year include: The Empty Bowls initiative, where students will create ceramic bowls to be purchased at a community dining event with proceeds going towards ending hunger in our community; the Breast Cancer "Pink" Gallery at Easton Hospital, where students create works of art in the color pink to inspire the patients and family members who walk the hallways of the Breast Cancer Center; the Artist in Residence Program featuring local artist Sue Stockman who will inspire students that pursuing a career as an artist is possible, while we are helping to create Mosaic Windows to be displayed on the walls of our schools classrooms without windows to the outside world. These events are in addition to the everyday artmaking within the classroom as well as participation in local, state and national student art exhibitions and competitions.

It has already been an eventful year for our NAHS Chapter, with SO much more to come! Even when things get crazy and often messy during the course of the school year one thing is for certain, here at St. Michaels Middle High School we are dedicated to the belief of Art for a cause, not for just applause.

The Beverly High School Chapter is off to a great start this year with numerous fundraisers and event ideas in the making. With a large number of new and active members, this year is sure to be a success. Plans for sales at the school store as well as face painting at sporting events, a candle fundraiser and decorating cookies for River House are progressing and will certainly get everyone involved in our school and community. Also, since both last year's Empty Bowls fundraiser and gingerbread ornament sale were a success, these fun and productive events are again planned to take place this year, donating a percent of the profit to our local social service agency. The Empty Bowls sale will take place in the spring and the gingerbread ornament sale takes place during the school's winter concert. Finally, this year's total proceeds will go to buying and donating art-related school supplies to our local middle and elementary schools.

Also this fall, we welcomed 15 new members into our already animated Society. November 14 was the induction ceremony for our new inductees. Student community service hours will be earned by helping with art shows put on for the school and community. In the winter, we will be selling snowman ornaments for a fundraiser. WARE JR. SR. HIGH SCHOOL, WARE (#2335)

2013-2014 NAHS club members... 26 strong!

Let me be the first to say how rewarding it is to be a part of such an uplifting organization as NAHS! Hi, my name is Brittny Corriveau. I am the secretary/historian of the Ware chapter of NAHS and I would like to introduce you to our executive board members: Sydanny Morris is the president of our group along with Olivia Beaudette who is vice president. Josh Chevalier is our treasurer. As a requirement of our membership this year, we have all decided to complete at least 5 hours of art-related community service to promote the arts in area. Being known as "the town that can't be licked," Ware has something we want to say! Following up on last year's spring news column, we have completed our goal of painting ten canvas panels with the help from our friends in the psychology department. We painted the panels pink to represent a color that helps temporarily calm moods. To study the effects on students, we hung them in the busy hallway outside of the psychology room to see how color affects mood and behavior. The project has been a complete success. Not only did we see a dramatic change in students' moods, the hallway that once felt so crowded and loud had suddenly seemed not so crowded anymore!

This year, for our first major project, Sydanny came up with the idea of painting figure silhouettes of students on the walls in our science stairway. Students can have their silhouette painted on the wall for a small fee. What better way of getting that cozy, familiar feeling than having friends surrounding us on our walls? All of the proceeds will be used to fund NAHS activities. We are currently in the process of finishing the final touches of planning out our fundraiser, and we will have a follow-up in the spring NAHS News issue. With all the ideas we have budding amongst our group, we have many projects that are just waiting to be done. Although as much as I would like to share our ideas with you, I'm going to leave the rest a secret until the next issue!

Last school year, Caledonia High School art students teamed with an organization titled The Memory Project to create portraits of orphaned children in Haiti. Each art student received a photograph of their Haitian child to construct an originally designed art piece to send back to the orphanages. The delivery process was extensive due to a new program implemented in the orphanages that allowed the children to live in a foster home for the summer.

In spite of the complicated delivery, the project proved to be an extreme success. As reported, great animation ran through the orphanages as the Haitian children received their meaningful keepsakes. Also—another exciting announcement—the Memory Project was able to raise $4,000 to purchase new mattresses for the orphanages' younger children. Caledonia High School's National Honor Society and National Art Honor Society's Fine Arts Night contributed to these funds by donating 100% of their admission fees.

Both The Memory Project and Caledonia Visual Arts are proud of the students' tremendous heart and great effort in creating these portraits. Through the universal language of art, Caledonia art students have positively impacted children from across the globe.

Induction.

The 2013-2014 FHS NAHS members.

The Florence High School chapter of the National Art Honor Society has been hard at work this fall. We have had our induction ceremony to welcome new members and begun our work with the community. We have grown since last year. This year we have 34 members in our group. This is great considering we have only had a National Art Honor Society chapter for the past two years. We started out with 10 members and have tripled. Our fall projects have been collecting silly socks for The Beautiful Feet campaign. These socks go to children, birth to 18, who are in the hospital. It's just a small way to try and brighten their day. We've also been working on collecting toys for Operation Christmas Child that send Christmas boxes to third world countries. Our first field trip is to Mustard Seed, which is a residential facility for adults with Downs Syndrome and other mental deficiencies. The students love this trip. We make Christmas crafts, play games, dance, and just spend time with the Seedsters. We are beginning work on 8-ft wooden toy soldiers that will be placed around our town for the Christmas holidays. Our plate is full, but our community is benefiting from this group's dedication. We did a few things over the summer also. Sidney Phillips, Activities Chairman, won the YAM flag competition for the state of Mississippi last fall. She, her mother, and I all traveled to NYC, sponsored by Sargent Art, as her prize. We had a fabulous time celebrating the arts in the Big Apple.

PEARL HIGH SCHOOL, PEARL (#759)

The NAHS at Pearl High School in Pearl has been going strong the first 9 weeks of school of our 2013-14 school year. About 40 returning members from last year started the year off with many projects. New members are added in November. Project 1: Painted a mural for the Pearl Park for Fall Harvest Day on Oct. 19. It promoted "Recycle, Reduce and Reuse." The materials were all collected and donated from the Pearl Beautification Board in our community. Paint was recycled from Acrylic Interior Latex, Walmart bags, bottle caps, Coke can hinges, orange juice tops, burlap, beads, jar lids, and wood scraps (4x8 ft). Project 2: Painted a mural for the PTCRC (Parent Teacher Community Resource Center). All of its paint was recycled also. This mural was placed at the children's playground at their facilities (4x6 ft). Project 3: Two NAHS members won a contest in their Art II classes for the backdrop for homecoming, football game, halftime activities. Chris Westlake and Anthony Snell are the designers. Then 30 other students helped them paint it on 8'x8' foam sheet, using acrylic paint. The theme was "It's Always a Holiday in Pirate Country." Project 4: A Homecoming Truck/Float designed for the Homecoming Parade. The Theme was "Halloween, Pirate style." All of these activities were done mostly outside of class and when finished other art classwork. We have many dedicated NAHS Art students who want to give back to school and community.

Matthew was showing his art in a gallery in Chelsea, Manhattan, NY, throughout the month of November. He is a freelance artist and graphic designer. He received his BA from Mississippi College and his MFA from Florida State University. He has shown in numerous galleries in New York, Florida, and England, and has a future Art Show planned for Stockholm, Sweden. He will speak about his art and how artists must promote themselves today in the Art World. We inducted 75 to 80 students. The remainder of the year... many more memories will be made on our journey together.

Fort Osage High School National Art Honor Society now consists of 64 active members. In our first year, we have taken an art club of 4 regular active art students and turned it into an excited group of art achievers. Our induction ceremony was beautiful, with many parents, guardians, grandparents, and other family members, bringing attendance at the Performance Art Center to a total of 260. The members were dressed for success and each received a red carnation, thanks to the donations of a local grocery floral shop.

NAHS at Fort Osage has participated in many Community Service Projects already this year: NAHS sponsored an Arts and Crafts Festival in September with 41 local crafters renting booth space in the varsity gym. This was an excellent fundraiser for NAHS and will continue to build in the years to come.

NAHS has had the opportunity to provide a wheelchair service for patrons at the Kansas City Chiefs football games held at Arrowhead Stadium in Kansas City, MO. Each game day, 12 different students attend the game and offer wheelchairs to those needing assistance to their seats. The students then pick the patrons up at the end of each game, taking them to a curiosity cart pickup station where they are then taken to their car. The Kansas City Chiefs donate $400 to Fort Osage NAHS each game in which the service is provided. The season has been strong, consisting of 10 games and hopefully additional NFL playoff games. Many times the students also assist the Red Coaters to the half-time event held on the field, allowing students to be around the million-dollar players—realizing that the players are ordinary people.

NAHS partnered with NHS by face painting for NHS Haunted House at our high school on October 30th. The event allows children ages 0 to 4th grade to walk through a child theme-based haunted house for free by donating one canned good for Harvesters of Kansas City. The lines were long, but with many NAHS face painters the children were very excited, especially when they did not have school the next day due to parent/teacher conferences, which allowed the students to keep their faces painted for another day. Each NAHS student also painted a pumpkin and sold them to parents attending the haunted house. The funds raised went into the NAHS Scholarship Fund.

NAHS Scholarship Fund was set up this year as an opportunity for any graduating senior NAHS member to receive scholarship money for college. Each senior must be attending a 4-year University or Art School, majoring in an art field, in order to receive scholarship monies.

NAHS students are now taking old hard suitcases and designing their artworks to paint on the suitcase. Art club has designed these suitcases in the past with great success. This year is even better since we have so many members working together to make the suitcases fantastic. We donate the suitcases to the Battered Women's Shelter and the Foster Children's Division of Jackson County Child Services. These individuals do not have anything of their own to carry their personal items in when moving around. This is a great Community Service Project allowing our students to be creative and give back by making a difference for someone else. We will have over 40 suitcases this year, having emptied their availability in the thrift stores in the area.

NAHS students have the opportunity to attend the Art Educational Series at Disney in Orlando, Florida, over Spring Break, March 2014. Students travel to Florida for 10 ten days, visiting SCAD campus, Ringling Art and Design Campus, and Full Sail University Campus providing them an opportunity to tour some outstanding art schools in the country. Students will also attend the educational leadership class at Disney World and visit all four theme parks. Most all of the students attending the trip to Florida have never been outside of their community. It is an eye-opening opportunity for them to see how large the world really is and have a better outlook of potential and possibilities. We take the students to Sanibel Island to see the beach and ocean as well. When we took the trip two years ago, the students were so excited they walked into the ocean with their clothes on and commented how large the world really is. The other staff members attending the trip, and I began to cry and realized once again that this is the reason we do what we do as teachers—taking the additional road to provide opportunities to our students.

HAZELWOOD WEST HIGH SCHOOL, HAZELWOOD (#3434)

Hazelwood West students create a yarn bombing installation in the trees on campus.

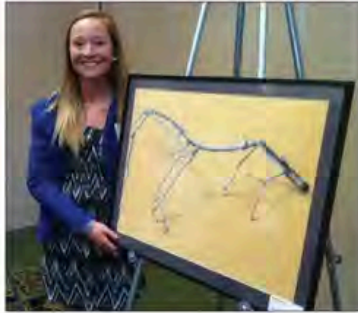

Hazelwood West students draw caricatures and make bracelets at Homecoming BBQ.

Our recent program that was successful and fun was yarn bombing the trees outside our school building. Trees were covered with knitted and crocheted fabrics. The experience was exciting and fun for everyone, and our installation attracted a lot of attention from the other students in our school. A Teen Night at the St. Louis Art Museum was organized by a council of teenagers in the area, one of which was a member of our Chapter. The activities planned were brilliant and inspiring! Two of our members won both the scavenger hunt and received third place in the Lego Sculpture contest. As a Chapter we decided to have a booth at the Homecoming BBQ to sell survivor bracelets that our members have made out of paracord. We also drew caricatures and sold them to visitors. The bracelets and caricatures were a huge success and raised money for charity. We had a blast! We thought it would be an amazing opportunity to take a fieldtrip as a chapter to a local art gallery and studio in our area known as The Foundry. We got to explore art studios where resident artists can work on things on a very small scale to huge installation pieces. We explored two exhibition galleries as well, one of which featured some of our members and sponsors. The fieldtrip was short but inspiring, with many of us coming back with various sketches and ideas. Our latest activity is making cards for terminally ill patients at Barnes Jewish Hospital. Everyone in the school was invited to help. We feel this opportunity is a great way to be charitable and to involve our whole school in the process.

MARSHFIELD HIGH SCHOOL, MARSHFIELD (#2387)

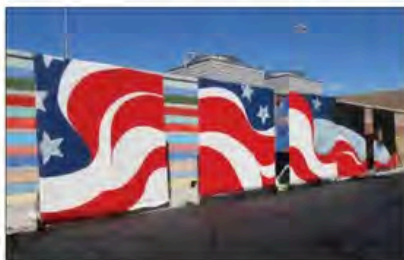

Marshfield alum J. Houke stands proudly by her winning entry in the 2013 Congressional Awards.

Marshfield High School's National Art Honor Society is experiencing yet another year of success. After painting the set for Gypsy, their hard work and amazing artistic talent earned them first place in this year's annual Scenographics national set design competition. Not only did they place first out of the entire nation, but they are also now featured on the cover of this year's Scenographics catalog! Also, NAHS graduate Jessica Houke ended the 2012 - 2013 year with a bang in her achievement of first place in her congressional district. Her winning piece, a charcoal drawing titled Winter Branch, is currently hanging in the Tunnell Building in Washington, DC. Recently NAHS has been involved in painting sets for the upcoming play You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown, and volunteers participated in face painting on October 26 during Marshfield's business expo. The club is currently brainstorming ideas to create a mural portraying a timeline of Marshfield. In this they are aiming to include dedication to community philanthropists Carl and Glessie Young in remembrance of their generous donation that gave us the wonderful Carl and Glessie Young Community Auditorium we have today.

COE-BROWN NORTHWOOD ACADEMY, NORTHWOOD (#1149)

This year, Coe-Brown Northwood Academy's National Art Honor Society chapter wants to use its new influx of members to drive art and creativity at our school. We will continue to have our ongoing student art displays throughout the school, open studios for any member to come and work on an art project, multiple art shows to showcase NAHS members' work, and even lead community outreach at local middle schools to show prospective students what opportunities are available to them in high school for their love of art. This year's National Art Honor Society members are: seniors Haleigh Simmons (President), Elena Smith (Vice President), Virginia Scarponi (Treasurer), Kris Bowers (Secretary), Hailey Serino (Recorder), Leanne Barattier, Abigail MacCallum, Alexis LaChapelle, Connor Bell, Kasey Cole, Alexandria Buell, and Gabrielle Turgeon; juniors Olivia Drew, Hanna Eaton, Abigail Ahern, Tess Lambert, Jessie Ohrenberger, Hailey Ruth, and Alyssa Bussiere; and sophomores Julia Harcourt and Jessica Cooper. Each member presented their work to a board of officers, and our chapter prides itself on having a group of dedicated artists. Our induction ceremony for this school year is to take place on March 18, 2014. The images included in this report were part of our fall membership show recently on display in our Guidance Conference room and were selected by the membership.

MANCHESTER MEMORIAL HIGH SCHOOL, MANCHESTER (#2615)

On Saturday, October 19, some NAHS students from Memorial HS were able to attend the New Hampshire Art Educators Conference at the NH Institute of Art. At this conference, both students and teachers had the opportunity to participate in workshops held in the NHIA studios. Working with a highly professional and well-respected printmaker, the students got a lesson in monoprinting and the chance to experiment and create their own prints. Students were also given a tour of the school where they visited the studios, dorms, common areas, and had lunch in the cafeteria. The students from Memorial's NAHS chapter were Hanna Kierstead, Nick Lopez Montilla, Jaime Mailloux, Rhiannon Bertot, Summer Hutchins, and Sarah Belhumeur.

In October, Chapter members also helped the Student Council with their annual Haunted House and Trick or Treat event for local elementary students. The NAHS set up a face-painting station to help give the kids a full Halloween experience in a safe and fun environment.

NASHUA HIGH SCHOOL SOUTH, NASHUA (#1396)

NAHS Officers.

NAHS Chapter 1396, Nashua High School South.

The new school year has finally arrived and the most recent inductees for the NAHS of Nashua High School South are starting to get prepared for the exciting affairs ahead. Nashua South's NAHS has brainstormed on many new events to help our community, and the population of the group has increased to almost double the size it was last year. We have made sure to spread the word and inform any student who doesn't know what we do. Here at NHSS, we adopt the innovative minds of our students to give back to our community through expression, charitable events, and creative fundraising.

The officers of our group are Jacob Lavoie as President, Josh Ogle as Vice President, Ashley Gillin as Secretary, Amelia Wagner as Treasurer, Sonia Gauvin as Historian, and Angeleah Andrews as Parliamentarian. Robin Peringer is not only a distinguished art teacher of the Nashua School District, but our very own group leader and organizer. Amber Snider, a member of our group, is the Gallery Coordinator for the school. She attends officer meetings and helps lead many events. The gallery is a small space where we exhibit student artwork in our main hallway to give kids the opportunity to experience the visual arts everyday, even if they don't have an art class.

One of the events we are continuing takes place in the Southern New Hampshire Medical Building of Nashua. There is an exceptionally large group of children with life-threatening diseases who stay at this hospital. The NAHS here at NHSS has taken charge of putting up artwork for the children that will spark creativity and hope. Our members volunteer to rotate new artwork every month so the patients can see a variety of different pieces by various student and faculty member artists of the Nashua School District. Our goal is for the patients to remember that they are still just as creative and have the same capabilities as the student artists their age.

An event we will be gladly revisiting this year is the Empty Bowls fundraiser. This will be our 18th year participating in Empty Bowls—it's a Nashua South favorite. Students all around the school will be creating bowls in our pottery room and then donating them to the Empty Bowls cause. The NAHS members here are in charge of selling the bowls to raise money for the Nashua Soup Kitchen. Last year we raised over $10,000, and it's always a goal to raise even more.

Another successful fundraising technique is the production of student artwork calendars. Each month features a different piece of work by members of Nashua South's NAHS. This year we are selling the calendars at $20 each to raise money for our group. Last year we raised over $1000 and plan to raise even more this year, so we can provide more exciting events in our community.

Our members are very enthusiastic about showing their NAHS pride. This is the first year Nashua High School South's NAHS has included apparel in the club to represent what we do. Every member voted and came to the consensus of two articles. These include a blue fleece jacket and a red windbreaker pullover. Each jacket has the NAHS emblem on the front and the name of the student displayed on the sleeve.

At Nashua High School South we are thrilled for the new year and the abundance of opportunities we can use to help spread the visual arts in our school and community. We strive to aid the lives of others using the artistry of the student body. Our National Art Honor Society members enjoy taking charge in doing what they love. What our students can do is absolutely astounding, and it's our goal to let everybody see exactly what we are capable of.

BERGEN COUNTY ACADEMIES, HACKENSACK (#1755)

We are pleased to share that, for the second year, one of our member's works has been selected as part of the USDOE ARTWRITE NOW exhibit in Washington, DC. Last year, members Shannon Levin and Alicia Suarez works were chosen for this very selective show and this year, it is Erica Oh's watercolor painting, Summer Shadows. This exhibit is sponsored by the President's Committee on Arts and Humanities, the Department of Education, and Scholastic Art and Writing Awards. Fifty-three works are chosen from approximately 500 Scholastic National Gold Medal winners whose work was featured at the Arnold and Sheila Aronson Galleries in NYC in June for this exhibit. The USDOE Student Art Exhibit Program provides students and teachers in the US and around the world an opportunity to display creative work from the classroom in a highly public place that honors their work as an effective path to learning and knowledge.

We are currently working on our "NAHS Members Only" calendar featuring one work from each current member. It serves as our main fundraiser for the year. We have just elected new officers for this year and are in the process of arranging Induction Ceremony details for new members.

GLEN RIDGE HIGH SCHOOL, GLEN RIDGE (#151)

Glen Ridge High School at Grounds for Sculpture.

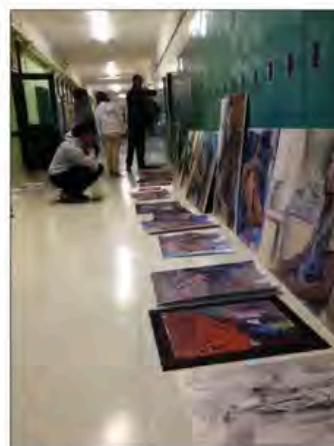

The members of NAHS Chapter 151 recently enjoyed a field trip to Grounds for Sculpture. Various contemporary sculptures can be admired amidst the 42-acre park located in Hamilton, NJ. Grounds for Sculpture is a nonprofit corporation founded by the artist Seward Johnson. The permanent collection not only includes the work of Johnson, but also sculptures created by world-renowned artists such as Marisol, Red Grooms, Kiki Smith, and George Segal. The park offers visitors a wonderful opportunity to fully engage with several of the pieces as well as enjoy the beautiful grounds. The students not only appreciated the artistic and aesthetic aspect but also the freedom to explore and discover. Since the Gifted and Talented class as well as the AP class is composed of NAHS members, they were given an assignment inspired by their visit. During the trip the students were asked to create several sketches of various sculptures from multiple points of view as well as take pictures for visual reference for color, textures, and details. The final two-dimensional piece is an integration of colored tissue as well as other paper types with a drawing media chosen by the students. The project yields a myriad of personal approaches, styles, and techniques and all were met with great success!

JCARTS members visit the Chelsea Galleries and the Highline in NYC.

Members of the JCARTS chapter of NAHS have had a busy fall: The senior and junior members visited the Chelsea Galleries in NYC in October to get a peek at the contemporary trends in art. It was a fun day filled with lots of walking and talking about the artwork we saw. The trip ended with a spectacular view of the city and photo shoot on the Highline!

Over the next few weeks, college recruiters will be visiting our school to review senior portfolios. In preparation for those visits, seniors showcase their portfolios in presentations to their peers to practice speaking about their visual ideas and artistic processes. The audience of underclassmen helps the seniors to further develop the commentary about their work in a talk back, question-and-answer session.

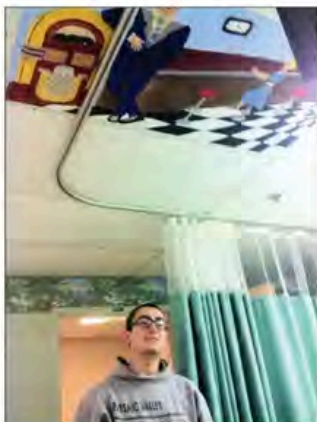

We are excited and proud of the artwork we created and submitted to NEAA for YoungArts and look forward to creating new artwork to submit to the upcoming Scholastic Art & Writing Awards.

We are wheel throwing and hand building 70-plus bowls for our annual Empty Bowls charity fundraiser set for the late winter. We have begun working on handpainted wooden signs to be sold at our Booster Club Holiday Craft Fair. We will be volunteering with the Salvation Army during the holidays. Our annual invitational art show is held in January. College representatives will be judging the artwork and handing out scholarships to deserving artists. We will be participating in numerous other art shows and competitions including the Vernon Invitational, Emerging Artist, Teen Arts, ArtStart at William Paterson College, Congressional and the Peter's Valley art show. We have some mural projects in the works as well, and we will continue to maintain our school's Permanent Art Collection. If fundraising goes well we hope to take a trip into NYC to visit a museum or two.

We have begun a mural project above the door of one of the classrooms at our school to promote the arts as well. We have been fundraising for the mural various ways. We have also been working with the Rio Rancho Art Association, volunteering at art workshops and participating in community art shows. We will also be volunteering to help clean up our community at the upcoming Big Event, a school-wide volunteer Saturday where students help residents and neighbors do various odd jobs around their home and property. This will be the second year that our NAHS chapter has participated as a group. BABYLON HIGH SCHOOL, BABYLON (#1142)

Stars of Hope.

This fall, the Babylon chapter of NAHS has already been working on many things. We participated in Stars of Hope where we painted and wrote inspirational words on wooden stars. Those stars were hung around our town, which was badly hit by Hurricane Sandy last fall. The stars are meant as encouragement for families who are still rebuilding.

We also worked on a "Safe Halloween" in our school. Our members designed, built, and painted a haunted house that kids could walk through as they entered into the cafeteria for different snacks and trick or treating.

We have again started our Memory portraits for children in Cambodia. This is our 6th year participating. We will be holding a bake sale on election day to raise money to help pay for the Memory Portrait project.

In December, we visited Discovery Times Square in NYC to see the "Art of the Bricks" exhibit. It is an art show where famous artwork is redone out of Legos. We went to the American Museum of Natural History to draw all the great artifacts there. Afterwards, we created a piece of artwork from our drawings in a nontraditional medium like the Legos.

CHARTER HIGH SCHOOL FOR APPLIED TECHNOLOGIES, BUFFALO (#3049)

The school year of 2013-2014 invited more than 50 new members to NAHS Charter High School for Applied Technologies Chapter #3049. With the previous members, our chapter is now 80 students strong who are ready to apply their talents to numerous projects. First, our members displayed their creativity by painting class banners for Homecoming week September 23-27. Next, members painted children's faces with symbols of autumn at our PTO's Fall Festival on Saturday October 19. Tuesday October 29, many members took on the challenge of decorating cupcakes for our annual Halloween Cupcake Decorating Contest. The next day, the most creative and scariest cupcake was selected by our judges, and then all baked goods were sold during the lunch periods. Community murals have been our main focus this past fall. A "Forever Living Tree" mural has just been completed for our family service center. CHSAT's school spirit has been displayed in two eagle mascot murals for our gymnasium. Our members sold Secret Santa candy canes during the holiday season to benefit The Memory Project.

CLARKSTOWN HIGH SCHOOL NORTH, NEW CITY (#2402)

Clarkstown North's chapter of the National Art Honor Society has been as busy as ever reaching out and staying involved with both the school and our community. This past spring, we partnered with the Hudson Valley Chapter of the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention to hold an "Out of the Darkness" suicide prevention walkathon at our school. Despite the rainy weather, our volunteers showed up full of enthusiasm and worked hard to make the walkathon a success. Altogether, we raised $5,506 to help fund programs for research, outreach, and education about this important cause. In April, we also held an exhibition and reception at the local Barnes and Noble bookstore. Students from our school exhibited their artworks at the show, and 10% of profits from the reception were donated to the United Hospice of Rockland.

After choosing new officers last spring, we dove right into a variety of new projects. This September, we helped create decorations for our school's homecoming dance, the main attraction of which was a stuffed scarecrow head cutout to match the theme of "Fall Fest." Now, we are working with the Arts Inclusion Program, which invites Clarkstown South's "Spirit" program special needs students to our school for an opportunity to participate in many different arts programs. Among our many upcoming projects is another exhibition and reception at Barnes and Noble, after which we will be working with Big Brothers, Big Sisters of Rockland County to run a fundraising Art Auction.

The Clarkstown North Art Honor Society has been reaching beyond the school to give back to our community. We have done so much in these past few months, and even more opportunities to create and help lie ahead of us. We look forward to an exciting and fulfilling year!

Half Hollow Hills High School West Chapter of the NAHS finished off the 2013 school year by participating in The

"The Memory Project is a nonprofit organization that works with art students around the world... a unique initiative in which art students create portraits for children and teens around the world who have been neglected, orphaned, or disadvantaged. Given that kids in such situations tend to have few personal keepsakes, we're aiming to provide them with special memories that capture a piece of their childhood. As much as possible, we also want to help the kids see themselves as works of art" (www.memoryproject.org).

In addition we hosted a very successful room at our school's annual Safe Halloween. All of our members chipped in by bringing in bags of candy, making decorations and welcoming our community's young trick-or-treaters and their families. PLEASANTVILLE HIGH SCHOOL, PLEASANTVILLE (#2205)

Deep within Pleasantville High School is the core of its creativity, the source of the roots that support its culture—the art room. Anybody who walks down the stairs to the art room is immediately greeted by a recently painted mural of a tree that seems to draw in the mind, beckoning all to a reclusive sanctuary. Within the walls of the art room, art students have the opportunity to take a wide array of classes from Fashion Illustration to Animation to Ceramics to Photography. And not only do they enjoy these classes, they excel in them as well. Numerous students from Pleasantville High School have had their work exhibited in galleries and have won recognition on both the state and national level for their work. Also within the art room are the weekly meetings of the National Art Honor Society and its closely related Art Club with all of its subsets, including Mug Club (a ceramics club), Photography Club, and most recently, the Mural Club and the Printing Club. Students in these clubs take their passion from the classroom to outside of it as well, spending their free time using pottery wheels, taking pictures, and getting paint all over themselves.

The National Art Honor Society is also very active in spreading art to the rest of the school. Each year, art students have the chance to design t-shirts, programs, and posters for the school's annual musical. They also design Art Club t-shirts which are hand printed using a silk screen. During Homecoming, art students created stunning chalk murals on the pavement outside the school to show their school spirit. Also, the NAHS, working closely in conjunction with Art Club, participates in a number of community service projects. Art students from Pleasantville High School go to the senior citizen center in town every Wednesday and work on art projects, such as stained glass windows, with the senior citizens. This activity fosters communication between two different generations and creates a unique understanding brought about by the power of art. Another event that brings the community in contact with art is the annual Art Show. The art show is held in an architecturally unique building on Pleasantville Day, which celebrates the founding of Pleasantville. The art show utilizes the spaces of the building to set up the artwork in unique and interesting ways. The show is a culmination of a year's worth of artwork done by students in all grade levels and highlighting the exceptional work created by NAHS members. On a more global scale, NAHS students participate in The Memory Project. This project seeks out talented artists to create portraits of orphans from impoverished nations around the world who have no means of tracing their growth from year to year. Students create these portraits as snapshots of each orphan's life to help them remember and to give them a meaningful gift. Every year, NAHS students donate some of their best work, which has taken countless hours to create, to a silent auction. The auction is set up in the library and the last day of it culminates in the National Art Honor Society Induction Ceremony. Each year, over $500 is raised and the money is donated to worthy charities like Doctors Without Borders. If there is one thing that an art student at Pleasantville High School can testify to, it is that art has the ability to connect people. From a small room in the basement of a small school in a small town, a lot of students are able to make an impact on the local, national, and global level. The roots that are embedded in a little art room belong to a tree that has branches spanning the whole globe. If these little roots of art can go on to help others, to expose them to art, to inspire them, then maybe they aren't so little after all.

Congratulations to our President, Bana Kakeb; Vice President, Amara Amadiogwu; Public Relations, Emma Szobozlai; Event Chair, Nancy Nieves; and Secretary, Cheyenne Lopez.

Up first are two art-related community service projects. For the third year the students are working on school-themed and New York City-themed drawings, paintings, and photographs for the Parents Association annual fundraiser. The artwork is always a big seller and helps to raise money for the school. The students are also putting their artistic talent to use to help the local Women's Homeless Shelter by creating decorations to make their holiday party memorable. Members of the NAHS are also in the process of forming a team to become part of, and start competing, in The Media League. Media League games consist of producing, uploading, and sharing original artwork created for that month's theme. We are very excited about our upcoming projects and look forward to planning more as the year progresses, including having guest speakers, taking field trips, additional community service projects, and our spring induction ceremony.

SCARSDALE HIGH SCHOOL, SCARSDALE (#1824)

The annual October Pumpkin Sale in Scarsdale Village.

Scarsdale High School's chapter of NAHS has had a great start to the year! Our first few meetings have been spent working on several different public art pieces for the school including sketches for mandalas and a five-piece mural. This will be the chapter's third year working on these murals, a five-section representation of the elements: earth, wind, water, fire, and ether. They are nearly finished and we hope to complete them by spring. As well as painting the murals, members are working on designing mandalas to paint on stools in the school's art classrooms. The sketches we are working on now will be painted on the tops of stools to brighten up the classroom. Additionally, our chapter recently held its annual painted pumpkin sale in late October. Members spent three meetings priming, painting, and perfecting their pumpkin designs; these pumpkins were then sold for $5 to $7 along with baked goods to raise money for club supplies. Designs ranged from Starry Night inspired patterns to minions from Despicable Me. The sale was very successful and we were able to use the money we raised to buy new craft projects and supplies to do with local homeless children.

Every other week members have the opportunity to stay an extra hour after the club meeting and go to Coachman Family Center where we do small art projects with homeless children. We are feeling so good about the start of this year, induction in December, and are so excited to continue working on our projects around the school.

THE URSULINE SCHOOL, NEW ROCHELLE (#2089)

The Ursuline School National Art Honor Society has worked with various charities and organizations. Last year, we worked with Houses for Haiti and created artistic pins that we sold to raise money to go toward post-earthquake recovery. We work on various school decorating projects, enhancing the art department building and illustrating covers and programs for our school. The Ursuline NAHS contributes pieces to be displayed on the pages of the school calendar. The NAHS has been a great experience in joining the Ursuline art community in a supportive atmosphere.

Members of the Valley Stream South HS Art Honor Society after the Pumpkin Festival.

Homecoming Festival.

We started off the year with a Pumpkin Festival to raise money for our local food bank. Members carved pumpkins and created scarecrows for our first annual Pumpkin Festival. On a dark Friday night in October students and families from the community entered through a spooky walkway in back of the school lined with glowing jack-o-lanterns leading the way into our auditorium for the festival proper. Members created Halloween-themed games and activities for the enjoyment of festival participants, including the popular Eyeball Bounce, Pumpkin Toss, Witch Pitch, and the ever popular Wrap the Mummy Race! Our chapter also sold a variety of homemade Halloween-themed goodies and creepy foods to be enjoyed by all. The following weekend we sold remaining scarecrows at our school's Homecoming Festival. Altogether we raised $500 for our local food bank! Immediately after Halloween our Chapter sponsored a Halloween Candy Buy Back for Operation Gratitude. Our candy was sent to California to be donated to the troops. We are now in the process of fund raising for the Philippines.

WANTAGH HIGH SCHOOL, WANTAGH (#2488)

WHS Chapter hosting guests from Amsterdam.

Our National Art Honor Society has brought a giving, artistic community to Wantagh High School. We spend all year making crafts such as bookmarks, bracelets, earrings, and picture frames, and sell them to students and faculty. Then, we donate the money to causes we, the students, pick. I am immensely proud to be the Co-President of such an organization. The results of our creative work are astounding. Through the 20/20/20 organization, we gave a blind person in a developing country sight. We donate annually to the Red Cross and to local charities and scholarships, such as the Joseph Testaverde Fund for Spinal Cord Research and the Mandy Heliotis Visual Arts Memorial Scholarship. Just through selling crafts, we have changed countless lives. After the catastrophic Haitian earthquake of 2010, we raised enough money to send a starving family a pregnant goat. The goat could be milked and its offspring sold to the community. A few months later, we were sent a letter with a photograph, stating how we may have saved them from death. This fall, we hosted two 11th-grade students, Emma van Bergeijk and Charlie Siebbeles, and their English teacher, the latter's mother, Ms. Caroline Siebbeles, from Amsterdam. Our Dutch students sat in on a cafeteria lunch as well as classes in art, drama, European history, and sociology. Afterwards they joined our weekly NAHS meeting to help us prepare for our upcoming Holidays Craft Fair. The collective creativity of this extracurricular activity focuses our energy into serving others. These accomplishments are heartfelt sources of joy. Wantagh High School members eagerly await attending the upcoming Fall 2015 NAHS conference for students and advisors, and look forward to meeting our nation's counterparts!

LEE COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL, SANFORD (#3419)

LCHS NAHS members design a quilt square for the Lee County Quilt Trail.

LCHS NAHS members hang a student art exhibit at the Temple Theater in downtown Sanford.

The Lee County High School NAHS chapter is off to another exciting and eventful school year. We have participated in several volunteer opportunities already this school year. We opened the semester by assisting the Sanford Lions Club with the County Fair by hanging all of the submitted student work for judging and display. We have also hung NAHS student exhibits throughout our community this fall, including shows at the Temple Theater and the Lee County Arts Council Office. Guest speaker and Master quilter Terri Riddle presented a program for our group prior to our working on a 4x4 plywood quilt square that would be included in the Lee County Quilt Trail in collaboration with the Hearts and Hands ECA Quilters Guild and the Lee County Arts Council. The Quilt Trail features large 4x4-ft plywood boards that are painted by local artists to resemble traditional quilt squares reflecting the historical and cultural qualities of Lee County. The finished "quilt squares" will be on display throughout Sanford directing visitors to the many historical, cultural, dining, and shopping venues that Lee County has to offer. Students completed a pottery-themed barn quilt square with pottery forms representing Lee County's five pottery shops. In October, several club members assisted the Sanford Brush & Palette Club with their annual art show by setting up the reception area and serving as ushers during the reception. Past LCHS NAHS member Kathryn Thomann was honored as the recipient of the Sanford Brush & Palette art scholarship and had a special exhibit of her work at the show. In November, NAHS members collaborated with the Lee County Arts Council in constructing 100 Popsicle stick sled ornaments to be distributed to children at the town's tree lighting ceremony on December 6. We are also in the planning phase to facilitate another "Arts Day" at Floyd Knight School, a school for students with special needs in our county in December. During "Arts Day" club members create and prepare art lessons that they then teach to the FLK students. Presenters must prepare a variety of projects, utilizing multiple mediums, as they will be working with students with special needs from Pre-K through high school age. Other projects in progress include designing our own NAHS t-shirts, creating sports-themed panels for display in the gym at one of our local Elementary Schools, and creating a fundraiser calendar to be sold in December that will feature members' artwork. Upcoming events include our induction ceremony in February and the North Carolina NAHS Retreat that will be held at UNC Pembroke on March 21.

PIEDMONT HIGH SCHOOL, MONROE (#1288)

Chapter 1288 at the Very Special Arts Festival.

NAHS students attended a college visit-workshop at UNCC.

Piedmont High School's chapter has begun the scrub process. This process is different from most clubs, because we want our members to demonstrate their dedication and commitment to the club before they are admitted. A scrub must interview all current members of the club, and then participate in at least one activity as a group to show teamwork and cooperation. They are challenged throughout the scrub process to always think outside the box, as well as follow directions. There are currently 31 prospective students who will receive membership in January.

As a club we participate in many events throughout the community, such as the current campaign being organized by the Piedmont NAHS, Be Bold Be Bald. It is a national campaign that Piedmont is participating in by selling bald caps to raise awareness and funds for cancer. Students may decorate their caps in honor or in memory of someone they know who has been affected by the disease. On October 17, students wore their bald caps to school to show support for all of those who have battled, or who are currently battling cancer. The National Art Honor Society advertised the campaign around the school as well as the whole community, encouraging students as well as teachers and parents to show their support through simply putting away their vanity for one day, and wearing a bald cap.

Our chapter has also been gathering prom dresses for the Sandbox prom project, a group that hosts a prom for children battling cancer. Later in the year, we will sponsor the Respect campaign to eliminate the use of the word "retard" in a derogatory manner, participate in a Cystic Fibrosis Walk, facilitate a Valentine's Day Dance at a local nursing home, and participate in Very Special Arts for special needs children. In March we will collaborate with Porter Ridge high school's NAHS to travel to Washington DC to photograph monuments.

The Piedmont High School chapter of the National Art Honor Society is very prestigious due to the requirements to be a member, as well as the service projects and activities that we participate in year after year.

The NAHS at Piedmont High School, Chapter 1288, consists of officers: President - Katy Trotter, Vice-President - Marta Lopez, Secretary - Ashton Braswell, Treasurer - Cali Lincomfelt, Historian - Courtney Thomas, Technologist - Shelby Dorton, and Parliamentarian - Cella McCall.

publishes a calendar comprised of 27 student artworks. Members spend a few weeks creating high contrast black and white pieces to enter into the judging. Thirteen of the artworks are selected by a group of professional artists from within the community and are awarded a full-page display. The remaining fourteen openings are filled with art selected by NAHS members. Members are then required to sell at least five calendars and have the option to gain service hours by selling them at the local Jerry's Artarama. Additionally, profits from the calendar sales provide the Bob Rankin scholarship to a NAHS member who is attending college for art. Our calendars provide a unique exhibition and service hour opportunity. This year we are excited to celebrate 35 years of publishing student artwork here at Sanderson.

Potteryfest (by Evan Embree, Vice President)

This year, Sanderson High School's chapter of NAHS participated in the Potteryfest event in Wake Forest, North Carolina. Potteryfest is a craft fair in which potters man booths and perform demos on the wheel. There were thirty potters total, and volunteers from both Sanderson and a local church group. The teenage volunteers helped children fashion a clay creation of their choosing—from simple pinch pots to dragons. The students benefited from the experience by working with the kids along with seeing the work of and talking to professional artists.

Harry Weckel and his Bountiful Empty Bowls.

Our National Art Honor Society is comprised many highly skilled student artists, including sculpture majors, 2D design students, and fine artists. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors work together on a variety of art related service projects. The Abington Senior High School NAHS chapter not only contributes to its community, but also focuses on developing individual artistic skills. For the past 12 years we have participated in Arcadia University's Empty Bowl Benefit. Sculpting, sanding, and glazing, students worked for a series of weeks creating amazing bowls under the theme of the letter "A." Ideas have included alligators, acorns, aquatic animals, and many more. The benefit consists of hundreds of donated ceramic bowls from high schools and local artists. The money raised at the event is donated to organizations that help fight hunger and homelessness. Selected bowls are auctioned off each year, for the past 2 years our members' bowls have been chosen for this honor.

During each meeting, members collaborate on new project ideas and service hour opportunities. In the spring we will collaborate with another local high school and take part in a print exchange with the theme of Art for Positive Change. We provide each member with important meeting reminders and notices about service opportunities, through an organized NAHS email.

Our Induction Ceremony.

This year is our second year in action, and we have a lot planned to make our artsy mark on our school and local community. In order to fund some of our activities, we created a couple of exciting fundraising ideas. Our first one is a gift-wrapping workshop which we have opened up to teachers and staff as well as students for the holiday season. Students will use recycled items such as newspaper, magazine, fabric, paper bags, and so on to wrap each gift individually. In addition, we also have handmade items to sell in our school store and we have a series of community workshops planned. One of the workshops supports a local charity and their "Souperbowl," where students invite their friends and families to make a clay bowl, this is then donated so that food can be served to less fortunate members of our community. In the Spring, we will hold a landscape painting class to focus on our beautiful rural surroundings. The money that we raise will be going towards supporting Design4Hope, a non-profit organization that seeks to bring happiness to the lives of sick children by giving them a dream bedroom makeover. We look forward to being a part of the process by painting, creating decorations, building furniture, and revealing the final product to the children.

We attended a local nursing home and worked alongside their residents to create tissue paper flowers. Our members enjoyed this experience greatly and loved hearing the resident's stories while creating flowers to hang in their rooms.

We are also assisting teachers within our school to help them in highlighting their subjects. Some of the requests include painting murals, creating college displays, making sets for our TV Media class, creatively displaying special projects... etc.

To celebrate our successes, and the joining of new members, our induction ceremony will be held in February 2014. This night will showcase the artwork of each student, and honor their dedication to this chapter.

Lastly, we have grown greatly since last year and have gained many more students interested in making this chapter a success. Our officers care deeply about each member as well as about making art an impressive part of our school and local community. This chapter is full of artists and art lovers and we look forward to developing this chapter further every year.

Welcome to the Upper Darby High School Chapter of NAHS! There we host a variety of galleries, sell handmade crafts and works of art, and provide fun, creative activities for anyone who wishes to participate. Additionally, this year we are participating in the Memory Project and hope to surpass the number of portraits we completed last time. We are currently gathering donations from our student body to help support this cause. Finally, we will be setting up a committee to jury works of art for our special NAHS Display Area in order to showcase the talent within our organization. The annual Fine Arts Spooktacular.

Members of Chapter 2551 are already working hard this year exploring the possibilities of illuminated, live sculptures. This year, the Fine Arts department is taking a trip to San Antonio, Texas, to participate in the Fiesta Flambeau. Students attending this trip have the exciting opportunity to perform in the world's largest illuminated parade - incorporating art, music, dance and drama for a beautiful spectacle unlike any other. More recently, members of NAHS just celebrated our eighth annual Spooktacular, which involves the entire school in one event. Students spent the majority of the week painting beautiful images of scenery, movies, or anything pertaining to their specific interests, as well as cross-curricular designs. Many student artists were sponsored by teachers and other faculty, and worked together to create an idea that eventually translated to paints or pastels. While many of the aspiring artists were working hard at their artworks, there were also a number of people carving away at pumpkins and turning them into wonderful works of art. Eventually, everything came together on a Friday afternoon, with everyone involved in the Fine Arts department celebrating the Spooktacular, viewing the art pieces, dressing up in costumes, listening to live music, and enjoying performances by the Senior High Chorus and Chamber Singers. Our own NAHS President, Molly Millette, won the painting contest for Most Aesthetic with a beautiful portrait of the Tree of Life, and Emily Kupa won the pumpkin contest. Similarly, Emily Kupa has been working hard this year on the Fine Arts website and also our first Fine Arts Yearbook. Also exciting was the pleasure of welcoming both MassArt and RISD to visit the AP Studio Art students, all of whom are members of NAHS. The admissions officer from RISD happened to be an alumni from Exeter-West Greenwich High School, which was not only exciting for us, but for him as well. Both admissions officers from RISD and MassArt provided wonderful feedback and critique to our students, and have inspired many to pursue a future in the art world. Ultimately, our NAHS members have had an already busy and exciting year, and are anticipating even more great things in this upcoming year.

The Hilton Head Island High School NAHS is proud to present its second completed public mural. Jill McAden (HIIIBE principal), Treva Kent (HIIIBE art teacher), and Patty Schoelkopf-Lewis (Advisor & Sponsor of HIIIBS NAHS) decided that the best way to promote art awareness within the community and schools was to produce a series of murals highlighting the IB curriculum. For this mural there were fourteen members that helped design, sketch, and paint the 64 in. by 80 in. mural. Ten of the members were 2013 graduates, while four are current HIIIBS NAHS members. The participating 2013 graduates were as follows: Karimen Ambrocio Alcantara, Stephanie Bartlett, Griffin Bradley, Ross Dungan, Camille Felix, Corie Fletcher, Savannah Mott, Brianna Norwood, and Max Schremmer. The current members that worked on the mural were Brynna Colella (Designer), Rachel Magnin, Ann Monroe, and Heidi Stine.

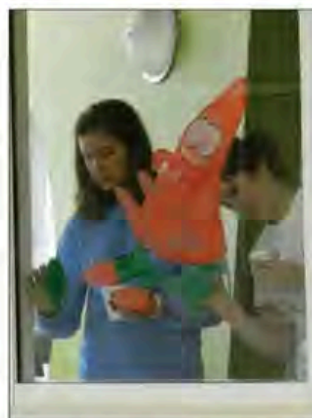

The mission of the National Art Honor Society is to further creative abilities and talents of the Society's members, to increase an awareness of art in relation to other areas of the school's curriculum, and to bring art to the attention of the school and community.

Students in the NAHS chapter at J.L. Mann High School are currently working with local artist Mark Mullinger on designing panels for Art Where You Park, a project in which several local high schools were invited to participate by the Greenville Youth Commission. Students have been working with Mr. Mullinger to create sketches in the style of Vincent van Gogh and inspired by our city's skyline, and these sketches were used to create paintings on 4 x 4 ft. plywood panels. In the spring, four panels from Mann's art department will be hung permanently in one of our city's parking garages.

On October 15, members from Mann's NAHS chapter participated in an annual painting project of the windows at the local children's hospital. During this service project, students paint fun character scenes and seasonal images to warm up the hospital's atmosphere. Not only did we receive a kind letter of thanks and high accolades after our visit, but we were also invited back to paint again in the spring for the first time that the hospital will have spring images on their windows!

WHITE KNOLL HIGH SCHOOL, LEXINGTON (#2148)

The National Art Honor Society at White Knoll High School (Chapter 2148), in Red Bank/ Lexington, is at a pivotal point at this time. It was on the decline a bit for the past few years, but just recently has been climbing to new heights. WK NAHS has been really excited in the activities it has undertaken so far this year, and is more than happy to share our achievements. This fall we completed an enormous mural in our school's library, now called the Learning Commons. The mural depicts communication objects and educational technology through the ages. It took three years of planning, sketching, drawing, and painting to finally be able to proudly say "It's done!" A multitude of NAHS Timberwolves contributed to the effort, and we are ecstatic to share our finished product with the rest of the country!

Our chapter competed in a statewide, no age limit, competition to create a scarecrow for the annual "Scarecrows in the Park" contest, sponsored by the Historic Columbia Foundation. This was the first year we have ever attempted to compete in this scary endeavor, and we actually won the Second Place award, out of 30+ entries! We decided to enter the competition on a whim, and had only a week to complete such a massive undertaking. We thought it would be neat to make a non-traditional scarecrow, and sculpt it out of only things we happened to have around the art room. The creation we ended up with stood to be a whopping six feet and three inches tall. Images are shown below of "Jeff", our monster scarecrow. "Jeff" was made from 100% recycled and post-consumer materials! The scarecrow contest will now be an annual endeavor. Our fall community service activity was cleaning up the grounds at the Lake Murray Park and Boat Landing one Saturday morning in September. As usual, we collected many bags of litter, and made the park more scenic and enjoyable for the public (at least for a while). Our second "lake sweep" will take place in April. We do two annually.

White Knoll National Art Honor Society members will participate in the annual NAHS State Conference at the Columbia Museum of Art in March. We're also planning for the production of a huge relief sculpture on a wall in our Commons Area in the spring.

So, WK NAHS is having a renaissance! We're beginning to participate in more competitions, are attaining more visibility, and striving to grow in numbers and activities. I am thrilled at where our organization is headed and am very proud of how far we've come.

By Savannah Cagle, the Humble President of White Knoll HS NAHS.

BRACE

On Friday October 18, the Briarcrest Regional Art Contest and Exhibition opened for viewers. Forty-two schools across northern Mississippi, eastern Arkansas, and west Tennessee participated in showing over 400 pieces of art. Over $5,000 in prizes was awarded to students of the MidSouth in grades K-12. Some 15 members of the National Art Honor Society (NAHS) put in approximately 40 volunteer hours by displaying art, tagging art after the judging, hosting evening shows, and wrapping the art for pick-up. The exhibition closed on October 25 with a ceremony. People's Choice Award, sponsored by patron Pam Duke, was a big hit this year. Viewers wrote comments to artists and selected their favorite art piece to be made into a T-shirt for next year's NAHS and an award of $250 cash was given. 2012 award winner was 2nd Grader Barrett Mcmillin from Woodland Presbyterian School for his painting, "Happy Cows." Each artist was given an envelop with viewer comments to encourage future artmaking.

B-TAF

Each year BCHS launches a Great Day of Service, which gives students opportunities to get involved and help the community. This is lead by Briarcrest Christian High School principal Eric Sullivan and Kent Austel, the spiritual ministries director. This year's Great Day of Service from BCHS, kicked-off the B-TAF: Briarcrest Traveling Art Fair; around thirty 10th, 11th, and 12th-grade students, from the National Art Honor Society, with senior and president, Hayden Morton in the lead, helped thirty 5th graders make art. Four different stations were offered to the kids for interaction and artmaking. Stations included, spin art, a graffiti wall, and sand painting, and a chance to decorate their own portfolios. This was for the well-behaved fifth grader who attends Shady Grove Elementary school, with the help of Jenna Ferguson (BCHS art instructor) and Dawn Weaver (Shady Grove art instructor). The members of the NAHS enjoyed pairing up for this rare opportunity for some of the Shady Grove students. Shady Grove Principal Kiersten Schnacke greeted high school students with an urn of steaming hot chocolate on the chilly October morning. After a hard morning of standardized testing, the fifth graders had a great chance to let their minds rest and create amazing works of art.

The group took a trip to The Dallas Museum of Art to view the Jim Hodges: Give More Than You Take exhibit that is showing until January 12, 2014. This exhibit served as a catalyst for a Drawing Tour Through a Museum Activity. Each member was issued a list of drawing activities for each room in the gallery to create a composition that will become the basis for a finished work later this year.

January will find the Chapter making snow globes, finishing their quilt, and creating wearable fashions out of trash to prepare for a fashion show at the end of the year. Many good things are in store for this enthusiastic bunch.

CLEAR LAKE HIGH SCHOOL, HOUSTON (#2865)

Clear Lake High School's National Art Honor Society has been involved in many art events around the Clear Lake area! Recently, CLHS NAHS students volunteered at Clear Creek ISD's Imagination Celebration, an eventful day filled with tons of fun art-related activities for elementary school students to encourage creativity. Students helped out with activities such as face painting, elementary student art exhibitions, the choir performance, and more.

NAHS students at CLHS have also volunteered to paint murals in the science hall, athletics locker rooms, and DECA school store. This recent mural-painting project that the students have embarked upon has brightened the school with many colorful images and has helped promote the art program here at Clear Lake High School!

Congratulations to students Richard Wu and Ted Shi as well, who participated in and won the Clear Creek ISD's Superintendent Holiday Card Contest! Their winning Holiday Card Contest entries will be used by the school district for holiday cards to be sent around the district and to other school districts.

RONALD REAGAN HIGH SCHOOL, SAN ANTONIO (#2608)

Students Working On Chalk It Up Mural.

Final Product of Chalk It Up.

San Antonio celebrates contemporary art annually with a street level gallery of chalk masterpieces at a festival called Chalk It Up. This year was Chalk It Up's 10th anniversary, which was livelier than ever with artists from all around the city making chalk murals. Activities were around every corner, from making bandanas to listening to a local live band. It's been a San Antonio tradition for citizens to come and make a work of art with chalk on the pavement of Houston Street. Individual artists come, but often organizations and groups come as well, including schools and other art clubs. Although there was a chance of rain that day, the artists persisted to release their ideas on the pavement, for it was the process of creating and making something artistic and creative that sustained their motivation, rather than the final product itself.

This year for Chalk It Up, Ronald Reagan High School's chapter of NAHS created a mural inspired by the artist Chiho Aoshima. Her style of playfulness and her childlike structures were appropriated and redesigned by the Reagan artists to convey the San Antonio. Their mural even had a twist, using sculptures to further their expression, something very unconventional for most muralists at Chalk It Up that strictly use chalk. Inspired by sculptor Do Ho Suh, the sculptures featured in Reagan NAHS's mural were designed to look like trademark buildings in San Antonio. In various sizes and bold colors, these sculptures added both visual interest and interactive form to the mural. In the end, their product was a very proud accomplishment for Reagan High School and its students.

Even the local newspaper noticed their aesthetic enthusiasm. Vice President of NAHS, Victoria Mahalik, and President of NAHS, Jetty Crittenden, were interviewed by the San Antonio Express News. Mrs. Gonzales, art teacher at Reagan, was also interviewed, appearing on the Express website and blog as well. Each expressed the inspiration of the mural and satisfaction earned during the art-making process.

Chalk It Up also brings one more exceptional opportunity to the Reagan NAHS—a link to their local community. By showing their talents on the pavements of San Antonio, NAHS professes its love of art to the San Antonio community. NAHS students develop a connection to their city as they interact and participate in this popular event alongside professional artists and other service organizations. This bond created between the community and Reagan NAHS will last these students a lifetime and continue to bloom as NAHS pursues its engagement in its local arts community.

WICHITA FALLS HIGH SCHOOL, WICHITA FALLS (#2627)

The Wichita Falls High School chapter of the National Art Honor Society is a hidden gem on the campus. Not only do they compete in local or statewide contests, these art students also help out in the school and the community. Over the past year they have volunteered their time to help re-paint a day care's mural, painted the paw prints in front of the school, and lent a hand at the Kemp Center of the Arts for the Annual Stroll and Roll. October 26, this group of creative students headed downtown to help set up this year's Zombie Crawl and 'Teens Make a Difference.

Since the end of last year, the newly elected National Art Honor Society officers have been ready to start the 2013-2014 school year. NAHS officers are selected by the previous year's officers and their Sponsor, art teacher Mr. Mayfield. At the NAHS Annual Art Show the new officers are announced and commemorated. The 2013-2014 officers are President Kagen Dunn, Vice President Abi Dagher, Treasurer Paul Reyes, Secretary Belle Darity, Assistant Secretary Kylie Pierson, Historian Melissa Zang Court Jester Ashely Vance, Publicist Esmeralda Martin, and Parliamentarian Kaleigh Wheat.

This year's events include participation in the Wichita Falls Stroll and Roll, 'Teens Make a Difference, Midwestern State University High School Art Competition, VASE, as well as hosting a public art exhibition at the school in May.

Wichita Falls High School National Honor Art Society has a wide variety of students from different backgrounds. Many are extremely talented, some are just starting to experiment with art, and others have a deep appreciation for what art students can create. Whoever they may be, their creative minds bring them together for a common purpose, and together they contribute to the overall pride of Wichita Falls High School.

The Clover Hill NAHS had its annual induction on Friday, Oct. 25 in the School Forum. Sixteen new members were inducted. Officers honored new inductees by presenting certificates and flowers. Punch and cake were served as parents and administrators enjoyed the event. The group has already started fund raising for a scholarship to be given to a senior who will pursue a degree in the Visual Arts next year.

The first meeting was held on October 31, with new members. The NAHS judged the Visual Art entries for a local elementary school to begin the meeting and then constructed lanterns to be used in the Richmond Light Parade on November 8th. 1708 Gallery board member Kendra Wadsworth had invited the group to participate. Kendra had been at Clover Hill as a visiting artist last year working with a Partners in the Arts grant. Students made lanterns using card stock and made designs on mason jars. LED lights were placed in lanterns and students met at the Historic Richmond Canal basin and walked in the "InLight" Parade to support the Arts in the Richmond community. The group is now planning to teach art enrichment lessons after school at a "feeder" elementary school!

FOREST PARK HIGH SCHOOL, WOODBRIDGE (#2268)Deidre Fitzgerald smiles from the 2013 Chalk Walk.President Elise Ketch and Social Chairman Morgan Easterly at first meeting of the year.

The Forest Park High School chapter of NAHS is kicking off the new school year with energy and fresh ideas. The chapter began 2013 with Chalk Walk, an after-school event in which members used chalk to replicate their favorite famous artworks onto the sidewalk in front of the school. In addition, the chapter assisted in the set-up and running of two successful art shows. New member induction, senior member graduation, and officer election took place in late spring.

Over the summer members created custom paintings to send to deployed soldiers in Afghanistan. The chapter designed original graphics to print on greeting cards that were given out with the Thanksgiving baskets of the local food pantry. New member induction was in late October. The schedule for the new school year is overflowing with new service projects. The chapter sent handmade holiday cards to deployed soldiers and painted impressionistic murals on the columns in the school library. A team of face painters volunteered their services at Forest Park's Breakfast with Santa. In the spring the group will paint faces at the county art show as a fundraiser for their selected charity.

Other highlights for the year include participating in the National Forest Park's first student art show, painting several murals around the county, and hosting two holiday craft days at the local elementary schools. The Forest Park NAHS is sure to have a productive year!

At Louisa County High School, National Art Honor Society members have been busy tracing the 2014 graduating class and painting their poses onto the wooden fence outside the school. LCHS incurred irreparable damage from the 5.8 magnitude earthquake on August 23, 2011. The Louisa High School community was temporarily placed in the neighboring Louisa Middle School and then moved to the FEMA provided pods (placed in the parking lots of the damaged LCHS). Last spring, a plywood fence was constructed around the border of the condemned LCHS in preparation for the school's demolition and reconstruction. Soon after the wall was erected, NAHS students brainstormed ideas of how to decorate this wall to brighten the atmosphere of the "pod-school." The plan was to originally paint the outlines of the class of 2013, but time did not allow for more than 20 to be painted before graduation in May. Since school has started again in August, NAHS members have been diligently working and have painted several outlines upon the wall. The goal is to have all 334 outlines of the seniors on the wall before the end of the 2013-2014 school year. Seniors have been traced posing with their friends and classmates, holding objects that hold a special meaning for them (art supplies, sports equipment), or doing their individual thing. This project allows for colorful artwork to be visible from nearly every main outdoor path on campus and helps preserve a piece of LCHS history, one colorful silhouette at a time.

The Stuarts Draft National Art Honor Society has had an exciting start to the year. We inducted 29 new members to our chapter of 41. Our induction ceremony was during a club meeting, and students received pledge cards and a paintbrush to welcome them into the club. Our club officially meets once a month, working on current fundraisers, doing things for our community, or having guest speakers talk with us. Some of our fundraisers include school-spirited tumblers, Halloween "Boo" Grams, Valentine Grams, and Soup Night. Our Soup Night is our largest fundraiser, taking us all school year to prepare for it. It raises money for our Senior Scholarship and involves handmade pottery, donations from local businesses, restaurants, and parents to give patrons a soup and bread dinner with a bowl they keep forever. Our NAHS is also big on being involved in the community. We often work with the local Ruritan club, serving them a meal at their monthly meeting twice a year and helping out at their largest community fundraiser. We have also painted children's faces at a local church for their Fall Festival and we collect art supplies for our elementary school every Christmas season. We hope to also have a float in the first annual Christmas Parade in Stuarts Draft this year!

CASCADE HIGH SCHOOL, EVERETT (#2455)

2013-14 (Members and Officers) Kate H, Sabrina B, Abby N, Cameron V, Kyle H, Ali F, Ashlea E.

Cascade High's NAHS Chapter 2455 has a great history of activity and involvement in the arts. We take pride in our service to Cascade, the Everett School District, and our community as a whole. In 2010 Chapter 2455 completed a 13x15 foot glass and ceramic mural for a local health clinic. This was followed by another year-long creation in 2012 designed to honor the cultural heritage of the local Native American peoples of this region. We involved all of our art class students in the creation of three totem poles representing every school department and student body activity. Our group photo shows some of these impressive totem poles that reach as high as 18 ft.

For the 2013-14 year, we are focusing our efforts toward creating a series of fused glass panels that will be installed in our library windows. The design depicts the Cascade Mt. Range, for which our school is proudly named. These fused glass panels depict the mountain range as the seasons change throughout the year. This will be a creative project that will carry on into the 2014-15 year. Our preparation for this starts with after school activities learning how to work with glass by producing fused glass tiles, ornaments, jewelry pendants, and the like.

In addition to our usual Chapter activities, we also serve in many aspects of our ASB events. We're regularly asked to design and paint backdrop panels promoting special functions such as our Homecoming Dance. In addition, Cascade hosts traditional events such as holiday activities for children in the community. We play a role in our school's annual food drive for the community which is nationally recognized and publicized for its' extraordinary effort, great success, and positive impact. Our members also help with every traditional activity by painting banners and making decorations. We're proud to be active members of Cascade High School. The school's mascot is a Bruin Bear and our colors are crimson and gray. We refer to ourselves as "The School of Pride". Cascade is very diverse in culture, language, and opportunities. There's a place for everyone in this very welcoming school community.

We have a unique set up because our group meets approximately 4 days a week, 45 minutes per day, for our "Flex" program. We currently have 20 members. We started our weeks together by creating a mural for the front atrium of our school. We took a trip to the High Museum of Atlanta to see the exhibit of The Girl with the Pearl Earring. We volunteered to usher parents to their conferences for our Conference Week. We have had a t-shirt competition where the PTA's newest spirit-wear design of "Keep Calm and Bleed Blue" was selected. The MMS visual arts classes sponsored an art show on November 7th at Gabriel's Desserts here in Marietta, where students prepared the artwork for the show. This included cutting mats, and creating hand-made cards and ornaments to be sold. We have many more plans for our time together this year. It has given us an opportunity to do more for our school than we would have been able to do independently. The experience has been educational, artistic, and fun!

Maiden Middle School in Catawba County, North Carolina is a first time National chapter. We have a total of 30 members consisting of only 8th graders. Each member has to complete 10 hours of community service, spreading those hours to at least two different projects in order to remain a member of the MMS NJAHS.

One current community service project in progress is called "Project Warmth." Catawba County is collecting coats, gloves, hats, scarves, and blankets to help families to stay warm this winter. The NJAHS is sponsoring the drive at Maiden Middle School just like last year when it was the Art Club by making posters and promoting the collection process from November 4 to December 6, 2013. The other project the NJAHS is doing is painting the art room walls gray to get rid of splatter paint that was created over the sink areas throughout the years. Over the past 10 years the newly renovated art room has received some wear on the walls during painting projects and clean up at the end of each semester. In order to maintain the improved renovations, Mrs. Paysour, the art teacher at MMS, wanted to keep the walls as nice as possible to instill in her students that it is everyone's responsibility to maintain the art room, not just hers. She explains to the students every year how fortunate they are to have the nice art room; therefore it is everyone's responsibility to maintain and improve it. The NJAHS members are also required to complete a service project for their whole school which has always been Mrs. Paysour's goal every year to help improve the school and its culture.

The pictures submitted have been created by Maiden Middle School 8th grade National Junior Arts Honor Society Members. As their teacher, I collaborated with the 8th-grade history teachers on famous U.S. leaders and role models. The list was provided to the students and they chose which leader/role model they wished to draw. The students were to research their person and why this person was famous or a role model. The artwork could be created in pencil or charcoal pencil on newspaper, printed paper related to the person's area, or plain drawing paper. It could also be in pen, with drawing shapes to create value or stippling with black dots.

Ronald Reagan was created by Shayla Thompson with pen using shapes to create value on white drawing paper. Abraham Lincoln was created by Abby Laney with pen using shapes to create value on white drawing paper. Marilyn Monroe was created by Kinley Rojzman with pencil on white drawing paper. John F. Kennedy was created by Sara Howard with charcoal pencil on white drawing paper. Theodore Roosevelt was created by Caitlyn Mitchell with pen using shapes to create value on white drawing paper.

Blackhawk Chapter of the NJAHS Induction Ceremony/ North Buncombe Middle School

This year in the Blackhawk Chapter of the National Junior Art Honor Society we have tons of fun things going on. We had our induction of new members on Thursday, November 7, and we spent the first fall meetings preparing an art show of our work for the ceremony. We had a fantastic show with collage postcards that expressed our NJAHS pledge we say at the beginning of each meeting. The pledge states, "I will in my life to the best of my ability through my talents in art, help to create a more beautiful world for myself, for humankind, and for all living things." Our guest speaker was a local architect and President of the Asheville AIA, Mr. Mark Allison. The opening remarks were made by Mr. Robert Waller, the Arts Education/AIG Specialist for Buncombe County Schools with welcoming remarks from our supportive principal, Ms. Sherry Barnette. Students shared why art is important to them and we lit candles representing the three primary colors. All new inductees were read the charge and given red carnations. The NJAHS joined the Wellness Committee on a hike to Bent Creek where we took art supplies, and we had another field trip to the Asheville Art Museum on December 4 to view the Permanent Collection through a docent-led tour. Before our Winter Break we will create tin ornaments inspired by traditional Mexican folk art to give to our school staff to show our appreciation as well as share the arts with others. In January we will be creating the prizes for our school's Chilly Challenge 8K and creating bowls for our Empty Bowls event later this winter.
