ART EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

Dear School Leader:

Every educator within your school plays an essential role in serving your overall school community and fostering student growth, particularly art educators. These professionals are natural problem solvers and innovative thinkers, not only by achieving artistic learning objectives, but also by broadening academic success.

Recognizing the evolving needs of educators in serving student populations from preK to university, the National Art Education Association (NAEA) is pleased to announce the in-person convening of thousands of visual arts educators for the 2027 NAEA National Convention, taking place in New York, NY, March 4–6, 2027.

The 2027 NAEA National Convention offers a comprehensive opportunity for educators involved in visual arts, design, and media arts to explore exemplary models of best practices and evidence-based methodologies. Through hundreds of carefully selected sessions, interactive workshops, and discussions, participants will gain invaluable insights to enhance visual arts, design, and media arts standards-based curriculum, instruction, assessment, and leadership. The program delivers 100% educational content applicable immediately to advance school and district level improvement plans.

By attending our Convention, educators can document their professional learning hours and have the option to earn University Accredited Continuing Education Units (CEU) as well. NAEA27 participants will engage with a dynamic community of professionals, including art specialists, visual arts teachers, school administrators, university professors, preservice educators, researchers, museum educators, and more—all united in their dedication to supporting student learning through arts education.

I extend my utmost appreciation for your leadership as an administrator as we collaborate to ensure access to a comprehensive, high-quality visual arts, design, and media arts education for all students nationwide. Thank you in advance for any support you may offer toward facilitating one or more members of your faculty to participate in this unparalleled professional learning experience.

Sincerely,

Laura L. Lott
